FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Evacuation of Fredericksburgh by Our Forces.

The Army Again on the Falmouth Side of the Rappahannock.

The Movement Executed with Success.

THE WOUNDED ALL SAFE.

Full Description of the Terrible Battle of Saturday.

Our Losses from Ten to Fifteen Thousand.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY.

OUR DISPATCH FROM HEADQUARTERS.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Falmouth, Tuesday, Dec. 16—10 P. M.

During last night the Army of the Potomac evacuated their positions on the opposite side of the river.

The movement was a perilous one but it was conducted in safety.

The artillery was the first to cross over the river.

The last of the infantry brought up the rear shortly after daylight.

The enemy never discovered the movement until it was too late to do us any harm.

As soon as the last man had got safely across the river the pontoon bridges were removed, thus cutting off all communication between the two shores.

The wounded are all safe and on this side of the river.

There was a heavy wind all last night, accompanied with considerable rain, which contributed to our advantage, as it prevented the rebels from hearing our movements.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

Simultaneously with the Army of the Potomac passing [illegible] quiet, and there was only desultory firing between picket and skirmishers along the lines of the rebels' batteries. The movement of the army on the withdrawal from Fredericksburgh, to the south side of the Rappahannock, began at dark on Tuesday night, and was successfully accomplished before daylight next morning. All the sick and wounded were removed during the day to hospital [illegible], with the apparent purpose, on the part of Gen. Burnside, of renewing the engagement in the afternoon of that day. These most entirely [illegible] were conveyed on stretchers and in ambulances, while every one able to do so walked across. The pontoon bridge was chiefly used, that being quite out of range of the enemy's batteries at the lower part of the town.

Gen. Burnside inspected the position of the troops in the afternoon, in the town, and was greeted with cheers which must have been distinctly heard in the enemy's lines. Activity throughout every department indicated that a battle was imminent. The Irish Brigade assembled in and around Mr. Dunn's, where the ceremony of presenting to it a set of beautiful colors, just sent from New-York city, was gone through with, Gen. Meagher making an address. The enemy's batteries kept a desultory fire upon the upper crossing, in order to retard the passage of the troops. The Surgeons were ordered to be in readiness to receive and care for a large number of additional wounded, and red flags were displayed on the tops of many of the large houses in town which were to be used for temporary hospitals.

The withdrawal of our forces from Fredericksburgh had, we know, been determined on at a council of the Corps Commanders during the day. It was decided on as a perilous undertaking, but one that, if successful, would rescue the army from the necessity of fighting another battle, with the prospect of sacrificing little or none the destruction of valuable lives.

The troops had received no intimation of their having to retreat, and had laid down rest to upon their arms for the night. The order then for them to fall in, many supposed it was for a night assault upon the enemy's works, and were not undeceived until they found themselves upon the pontoon bridges silently retreating across the stream.

A heavy fog or mist, which blew all sound away from the rebel lines, greatly facilitated the movement. Bridges were covered with earth, to deaden the sound of the moving artillery, and a dark night was every object from view.

Gen. Franklin's Grand Division, occupying the extreme left, began to move as soon as it was dark, and the right and centre of Gen. Burnside and Hooker took up the line of march almost simultaneously, moving in good order, but silently away from under the very guns of the enemy.

All three of the crossings were used, making six bridges. No accident of consequence occurred. The troops obeyed with alacrity every order, and waited with patience their turn to cross. The artillery and cavalry observed in moving column, very much in the order in which they went into battle.

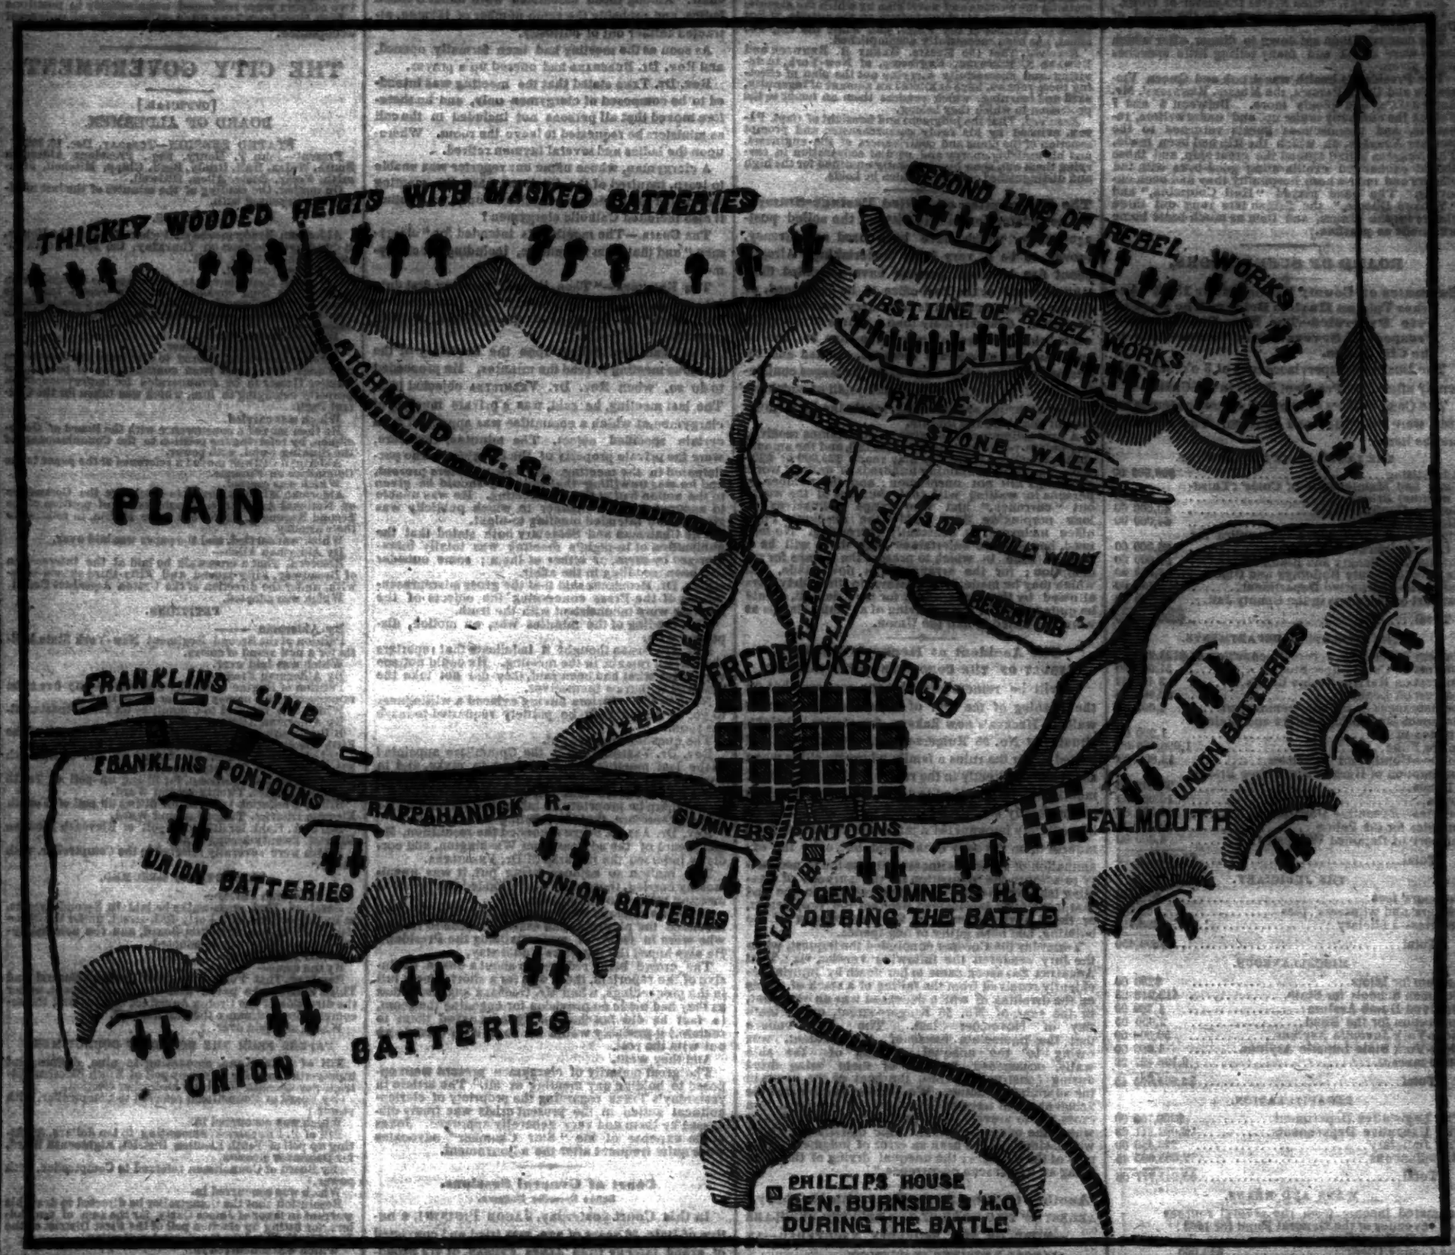
Many officers and soldiers expressed great regret at being withdrawn from before the enemy, saying that they would have preferred dying in front of the rebel fortifications. Nevertheless, every one acquiesced in the wisdom of the movement.

Few only of the wounded are believed to have been left on the field within reach of the enemy's rifle pits.

Two brigades, belonging to Gen. Franklin's corps, occupy the town as advanced pickets. Our artillery, placed on the bluff on the other side of the river, will be able to keep possession of the town.

The movement, from beginning to end, was a complete success, and the various commands returned to their former encampments to repose.

At sunrise on Tuesday morning our heavy guns were opened on the rebel batteries, but elicited little response.



THE BATTLE OF FREDERICKSBURG.

Full and Reliable Details from Our Special Correspondent.

PHILLIPS HOUSE, HEADQUARTERS OF GEN. BURNSIDE, OPPOSITE FREDERICKSBURGH, VA., Saturday—Midnight, Dec. 13, 1862.

The battle of Fredericksburgh, which has been raging since 10 o'clock this morning, without a moment's pause, was closed by darkness to-night.

In its duration, its intensity, if not, also, in the losses it has occasioned, it says the climax of the whole series of the battles of the campaign. The Nation will stand aghast at the terrible price which has been paid for its life when the realities of the battle-field of Fredericksburgh are spread before it.

Unhappily, like many of our engagements, though serving to illustrate the splendid valor of our troops, it has failed to accomplish the object sought. The sequel alone can tell whether the work of to-day is to be the prelude to a glorious victory or an ignominious defeat. But the result thus far leaves us with a loss of from ten to fifteen thousand men, and absolutely nothing gained. Along the whole line the rebels hold their own. Again and again we have hurled forward our masses on their position. At each time the hammer was broken on the anvil!

I have no heart, in the mood which the events of to-day have inspired, to write other than a bald record of facts. Whatever there was in the battle scene of picturesque or sublime—and viewed merely as a spectacle a great battle displays these qualities in a way that no manifestation of natural forces or of human energy ever can—must shrink and shrivel before the awful earnestness of the issue. Of course at this moment it is impossible to give more than the most general impressions;—the phenomena of a battle are too multitudinous and complicated for the resources of any one observer; and the man does not live who can reproduce with life and truth the reality of even the smallest engagement.

The theatre of operations to-day extended from Fredericksburgh on the right and down the south side of the Rappahannock for two miles. The accompanying diagram, together with a brief description, may serve to make the account a little clearer.

Immediately behind the town of Fredericksburgh, the land forms a plateau, or smooth field, running back for about a third of a mile. It then rises for forty or fifty yards, forming a ridge of ground, which runs along to the left for about a quarter of a mile, where it abuts at Hazel Dell, a ravine formed by the Hazel River, which empties into the Rappahannock, west of the town. At the foot of the ridge runs the telegraph road, flanked by a stone wall. This eminence was studded with rebel batteries. To the right, along up the river, the ridge prolongs itself to opposite Falmouth, and beyond; and here, too, batteries were planted on every advantageous position. Back of the first ridge is another plateau, and then a second terrace of wooded hills, where a second line of fortifications were placed. Between the rear of the town and the first ridge, a canal runs right and left, and empties into the river some distance above Falmouth.

This plain, of a third of a mile deep, between the suburbs of Fredericksburgh and the first ridge of hills, was the theatre of operations of the Right Grand Division of the army, under Major-Gen. BURNSIDE. On this narrow theatre our brave troops surged and swept, forward and backward, in the tide of battle, for ten long hours.

From the lower part of the town the ridge on which it is built slopes abruptly down to a comparatively level or undulating country, which stretches for some miles down the Rappahannock. About a couple of miles back of the river it rises into a wooded slope. At a point a mile and a half below Fredericksburgh, two pontoons had been thrown across on Thursday morning, and on Friday the whole of the Left Grand Division, under the command of Maj.-Gen. FRANKLIN, had marched over the river. Daylight of Saturday found the force drawn up in battle array on this broad plain skirting the Rappahannock.

The battle-ground, though very marshy in some places, presented a fine field for military evolutions. The turnpike leading to Fredericksburgh runs about one-half of a mile from and nearly parallel to the river. Beyond is the railroad, and still further beyond, the woody range of hills in which the enemy were strongly entrenched. About a mile and a half from Fredericksburgh, nearly on the river edge, is situated A. N. BARRETT'S stone mansion, after the English style.

The line of battle as it appeared in the morning, was as follows: The Sixth Army Corps, under Gen. SMITH, (FRANKLIN'S old force,) on the right, composed of three divisions, namely: Gen. NEWTON, on extreme right and rear; Gen. BURKE, on the centre, and Gen. HOWE, on the left.

The First Army Corps, Gen. REYNOLDS', extending still further to the left, drawn up in the following order: Gen. GRESOM' Division on the right, connecting with Gen. HOWE'S; Gen. MEADE'S, centre, and Gen. DOUBLEDAY, left, fronting to the southward and resting nearly on the river. This constituted the order in which our forces were drawn up, there being three distinct lines of battle.

Opposed to our right, under Gen. BURKE, was the rebel left, under command of Gen. LONGSTREET. Opposed to our left, under Gen. FRANKLIN, was the rebel right, under Gen. JACKSON. Gen. LEE, Generalissimo of the Southern army, was in person in command of the Confederate forces during the whole day.

The plan of Gen. BURNSIDE, agreed upon in Council of War, was to endeavor to pierce the rebel centre. Early on the morning of Saturday the order was given that BURKE'S left, composed of the Ninth Army Corps, under command of Gen. WILCOX, should be extended until it reached FRANKLIN'S right—thus forming a continuous line of battle along the river for two miles, the left resting on the river at the point where the lower pontoons cross, and the right on Fredericksburgh. The left wing, comprising the whole of FRANKLIN'S command, (fifty thousand men,) should then be swung round, as on a pivot formed by BURKE'S extreme right, resting on Fredericksburgh. If successful in this manœuvre, FRANKLIN would divide the rebel line, take possession of the railroad, (the line of retreat,) and come in on the flank of the rebel works back of Fredericksburgh. While this movement was being developed, a division was to be sent up from Gen. BURKE'S command, by the plank road, to storm the ridge. If there should be any failure in this, it was hoped the cooperation of FRANKLIN would presently make success certain. HOOKER'S corps was destined to act as a reserve.

The dawn of Saturday found the forces distributed as thus indicated. It was a fine Virginia morning—mild and balmy as a September day, though the mist and fog of a late Indian Summer hung over the field of battle. About 9 o'clock, the Phillips House (the headquarters of Gen. BURKE, about a mile from the river on the north side, and where, by the kind hospitality of the large-hearted old soldier, I had been staying for some time during a spell of camp-fever) was the scene of a numerous assemblage of officers. Gen. BURNSIDE and Gen. HOOKER joked Gen. BURKE here, and the balcony and grounds in front were presently filled with officers and Aides.

It was with alarm and pain I found a general want of confidence and gloomy forebodings among some men whose sound judgment I had learned to trust. The plan of attacking the rebel stronghold directly in front would, it was feared, prove a most hazardous enterprise, and one of which there is no successful example in military history. It was doubted that the cooperation of the right and left, according to the programme, would admit of practical executions, and things were generally at loose ends. "The chess-board," said NAPOLEON at WAGRAM, "is dreadfully confused; there is but I that see through it." We all felt that the first part of the remark was applicable to our own case. But did we all feel equally confident that there was in our case an "I" that "saw through it?"

About 11½ o'clock I crossed the Rappahannock on the upper pontoon bridge, and passed through the town of Fredericksburgh, along the main street. At this time brisk skirmishing was going on in the outskirts of the town, the rebel sharpshooters stubbornly contesting every inch of the ground as our skirmishers advanced. Caroline, or Main-street, was occupied by Gen. KIMBALL'S, Gen. FESSENDEN'S, and Acting Gen. ZOOK'S Brigade, with portions of HANCOCK'S Division; the latter, with his artillery, lined the bank of the river in the neighborhood of the middle crossing, which is just below the railroad bridge. Other troops from the corps of Gens. WILCOX and COUCH occupied the other streets of the town nearer the line of advance. Our batteries replied across the river, covering the advance of our forces.

In the meantime FRANKLIN had been for a couple of hours briskly engaged with the enemy on the left. The force in Fredericksburgh had driven the rebels out of the suburbs of the town and rested their column on the canal. The time had now come to attempt an advance on the rebel position.

The orders were to move rapidly; charge up the hill and take the batteries at the point of the bayonet. Orders easy to give, but, ah! how hard of execution!

Look at the position to be stormed.

There is a bare plateau of a third of a mile, which the storming party will have to cross. In doing so they will be exposed to the fire, first, of the enemy's sharpshooters, posted behind a stone wall running along the base of the ridge—of a double row of rifle-pits on the rise of the crest—of the heavy batteries behind strong field-works that crad the top of the hill—of a powerful infantry force now lying concealed behind these—of a plunging fire from the batteries on the lower range—of a double enfilading fire from "cannon to right of them, cannon to left of them," Sebastopol was not half as strong.

The line of battle was formed by Cogsw's Corps, (the Second,) composed of the Divisions of FRENCH, HAZLETT and HOWARD, the left of the line abutting on BURNSIDE' Division of WINSOR'S Corps, (the Ninth.) The first advanced was FRENCH'S, composed of the brigades of KIMBALL, MEAGHER and WEBER, supported by HANCOCK'S Division, consisting of the Brigades of CALDWELL, ZOOK and MEAGHER.

Forming his men under cover of a small knoll in the rear of the town, skirmishers were deployed in the left towards Hazel Dell; BURNSIDE, supporting at the same time, moved up, and rested on a point on the railroad.

The moment they exposed themselves on the railroad, forth burst the deadly hail. From the rifle-pits came the murderously-aimed missiles; from the batteries, tier above tier, on the terraces, shot planes of fire; from the enfilading cannon, distributed on the arc of a circle two miles in extent, came cross showers of shot and shell.

Imagine, if you can, for my resources are unequal to the task of telling you, the situation of that gallant but doomed division.

Across the plain for a while they swept under this fatal fire. They were literally mowed down. The bursting shells make great gaps in their ranks; but these are presently filled by the "closing up" of the line. For fifteen immortal minutes at least they remain under this fiery surge. Onward they press, though their ranks grow fearfully thin. They have passed over a greater part of the interval and have almost reached the base of the hill, when brigade after brigade of rebels rise up on the crest and pour in fresh volleys of musketry at short range. To those who, through the glass, looked on, it was a perilous sight indeed. Flesh and blood could not endure it. They fell back shattered and broken, amid shouts and yells from the enemy.

Gen. FRENCH'S Division went into the fight six thousand strong; late at night he told me he could count but fifteen hundred!

The fire of the rebel batteries was not the only thing from which our men had to suffer. Thinking to silence the enemy's guns, our batteries planted on the bluff, on the north side of the river, embracing the 4½ siege guns, some batteries of 20-pounder Parrots and the artillery of the left and left centre opened fire. The intervening space is between twenty-seven hundred and three thousand yards: too great a distance to calculate on the projectiles carrying with accuracy—particularly contractors' ammunition. If shell should fall short, or take an oblique direction, and explode among our troops, it would be difficult to see how a panic could be prevented. Promptly realizing this danger, Gen. HUNT, Chief of Artillery, instantly dispatched orders to cease firing. It was well he did so, for immediately afterward an ADJ.-GEN. galloping from Gen. COUCH, from the other side of the river, begging that our batteries should cease, as they were actually firing into his command!

While the broken column retires to its original position in the outskirts of the town, to endeavor for a new encounter, let us see what goes on on the left.

At daylight, the forces constituting the left Grand Division of the army appeared drawn up in battle array on the broad plain below Fredericksburgh and skirting the Rappahannock.

At early morn the Thirteenth Massachusetts, Pennsylvania Bucktails, and two or three other regiments were deployed in front as skirmishers, [illegible] and the rebel skirmishers considerable firing took place. No sooner, however, had the heavy mist cleared away, than Capt. HAZE'S Battery, (Second Maine,) planted at the right of GRESOM' Division, opened fire upon the rebels. Artillery firing now became general along the whole line, which was returned by the rebels. Heavy siege guns in our rear, the First Maryland, First Massachusetts Batteries, and Battery D Fifth Artillery, on the right; Capt. RAMSAY'S, and Capt. WALTON'S in front, and COWAN'S New-York, and Lieut. HAUT'S Third New-York Independent on the left, and other batteries, kept up a terrific fire on the rebels. Orders now came to advance, and about 9 o'clock GRESOM' and MEADE'S Divisions commenced moving slowly forward.

Gen. MEADE'S command, consisting of the Pennsylvania Reserves, arranged in the following order: First Brigade, embracing the First, Second, one Hundred and Twenty-first and Sixth Regiments on the left; Second Brigade—Third, Fourth, Seventh and Eighth, centre; and Third Brigade, (JACKSON'S,) Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth, at [illegible].

The advance resulted in almost sweeping our lines, which were before somewhat of a [illegible].

Considerable resistance was met with, yet the forces continued to move forward, until at mid-day the line of battle was three-quarters of a mile in advance of where it had been at the outset. But now came the reserve fire of the enemy with terrific force. Shell and canister were poured into our men from various points, while the rebel infantry opposing fired with rapidity. Still they continued to press on. Several batteries moved forward at the same time. As our troops saw the enemy giving way, cheer after cheer rent the air.

About 1 o'clock, Gen. MEADE ordered a charge, which was well executed—the men pressing on the edge of the very crest, and skilfully penetrating by a movement on the flank, an opening which happened to occur between the Division of A. P. HILL and Ransom's Brigade, captured several hundred prisoners belonging to the Sixty-first Georgia and Thirty-third North Carolina.

While the fight was progressing at this point, the enemy sent down heavy columns down on our left, near the river. They were handsomely repulsed and driven back, however, by Gen. DOUBLEDAY'S Division—COWAN'S New-York and Lieut. HAUT'S Fourth Artillery, and Third New-York Batteries acting very materially in the discomfiture of the enemy. Owing to the lack of reinforcements, Gen. MEADE'S command was obliged to fall back a quarter of a mile, where they remained—three-quarters of a mile beyond the ground first occupied.

Very heavy musketry firing continued along the line, neither side gaining any material advantage. About 1½ o'clock the first line of battle in Gen. GRESOM' Division was relieved by the second, when TOWNS' Brigade, now commanded by Col. ROBERTS, charged over an open field beyond the railroad, and down into the edge of the woods, overlaying the breastworks which the enemy had constructed here, and capturing 200 prisoners, belonging to the Thirty-sixth North Carolina and a South Carolina regiment. Gen. GRESOM was severely wounded in the right hand. They held their own for some time, but were eventually compelled to fall back. The Second Maine Battery advanced with GRESOM' Division. When it fell back, three guns were left to hold upon the advancing enemy. An order came at that moment to cease firing, as the force coming from the woods were our own men. When it had advanced, however, to within fifty yards, the Commander of the battery became convinced that they were rebels, and moving on to capture this battery, five guns were opened upon them, but after five rounds had been fired, the battery was ordered to fall back. Having taken leave the Captain called for volunteers to return and bring off the battery. Sergeant BURT, Sergeant FOSTER, Corporal R. GREELEY, and twelve men belonging to the 19th Maine Regiment, stepped forward. The undertaking though a hazardous one, proved successful, as the abandoned gun was brought off in safety. It was while the fight was progressing at this point that Gen. BAYARD was fatally wounded. He had just reached Gen. FRANKLIN'S headquarters in a small grove of the Bernard House, and when a shot came one of the trees, when a ball, striking a few yards in front of him, glanced and then went through his thigh, inflicting a fearful wound. He was immediately conveyed to the Bernard House and placed in charge of Dr. PARRIN, Surgeon of the Brigade. As he was lying on the couch, the Chaplain of the HARNEY Light Cavalry approached and inquired if he desired him to write anything for him. "Nothing," he replied; then turning to Surgeon PARRIN, he inquired if he should be able to live forty-eight hours. A negative answer being given, he further inquired if he should die easy. Several of the surgeons in attendance thought his life might be saved by amputating the wounded limb, but the chances were so small he preferred not to undergo the operation. He was perfectly sensible, and never for once lost that self-possession which has always characterized him on the field of battle.

About 2 o'clock Gen. BURNSIDE'S Division, of Gen. HOOKER'S Grand Division, which had been delayed for some time in crossing by the enemy's shelling,

THE GREAT NAVAL TRIAL.

Trial Trip of the Iron-Clad Battery Monitor.

A Short Cruise—Her Performance Witnessed by Thousands—All Disputes at an End.

Yesterday morning, in compliance with orders from the Navy Department, the United States Iron-clad battery Monitor started on her trial trip. In order that there should be no doubt about the result of the important experiment, Secretary WELLES appointed a Naval Commission to witness the trial, and invited some of the leading officers, all gentlemen of the highest professional reputation in the service; Commodore CHARLES C. ROGERS, Commander of the iron-clad squadron; Capt. MORRIS, late of the Cumberland, and Capt. WEST, Navy Yard, Brooklyn, and the Engineer battery, Capt. ... The following distinguished officers were also on board:

Capt. LAGOVSKY, of the Imperial Navy of Russia; Capt. BARNABY, Naval Constructor in the same navy; ... Chief of Ordnance, Commander ... Engineer Bureau, Capt. WORDEN and ...

At 10 o'clock all embarked on the Monitor at the Navy-yard, and at 10½ o'clock, amid a severe shower of driving rain, she vessel shoved off unaided, and moved up the North River. Her engines were put in motion, and with twenty-seven pounds of steam, she gave fifty revolutions a minute. The following is the first report. The distance from ... to the Battery was accomplished in ... of about 8½ miles an hour. Soon after ... was increased to six, and she was ordered to be driven even faster, when the boilers began to ... As the revolutions can be put up to 70, at ... with the resulting extended power of steam, ... of the Monitor will be almost equal to that of the Passaic, seven miles an hour. The tide was against her yesterday, and also a very high breeze, but their influence in retarding ... to low down, and to "settled," was not very great. We stopped at the foot of Thirteenth-street to take on board Mr. OSS, one of Mr. ERICSSON's representatives, who came to see how things worked. At Jackson's, of Thirty-fifth-street, 25 pounds of steam only produced 56 revolutions, 27 pounds having previously obtained 58, or two revolutions more, but the foaming of the boilers had not commenced during the first half hour. From Thirty-fifth-street up the river, the progress was even and satisfactory. Six miles an hour, was easily accomplished, notwithstanding the newness of the boilers. The ... of the Passaic did not seem to fascinate steamboat travellers with iron-clads, for they praised all the characteristics of prize-fighting as we passed. After a cold wait we reached the Palisades at about one o'clock, and made preparations to anchor; soundings were taken, and the bitters of chain run out, which secured the ... The Naval Commission then adjourned to ... and discussed the initiatory movements for ... Powder was taken from a steam-tug, which brought it from Bedloe's Island.

At about 2½ or 3 o'clock firing commenced. Three ... were fired, and the two balls were sent into the bosom of the Palisades. They actually shook the entire shore for hundreds of yards, and ... the solid shot fell rocks and gravel, for nearly a ... of a mile, and into the river. A gentleman ... from there and stated that the shots were up the north footpath. He also informed parties on board that during the Passaic's trial, one of her shot struck ... and that it is fragments in the vicinity. ... shots, but only ... as stated, it being rather dark to continue. The trial trip of the Passaic was made under the auspices of Capt. ENCESSON, who did not object to a ... report of it. The Monitor is in the hands of ... Commander, and Capt. WORDEN, its representative ... the results of the experiment can give no comfort or information to the enemy:

First—The various principles involved in the experiments are proved practicable.

Second—That the barrel-bolt hole need not be widened is now established beyond all doubt.

Third—The Monitor, in her present shape, will go to sea, on active service, this week. Commodore ROGERS and Capt. STORRY expressed themselves individually highly satisfied with the general success of the experiments. Not a bolt gave way during the entire trial. The Commission, of course, suggest improvements in various details, which can be effected in a fortnight hence.

The work of the day being over, preparations were made to return. The pilot, however, did not wish to assume the responsibility of anchoring off the battery ... the length of chain available, and as steaming up to the Navy Yard at so late an hour was out of the question, it was deemed best to leave the vessel off the Palisades. The party on board then returned to ... in the new boat, all in excellent humor.

The Monitor will undergo all the Navy-yard to-day and to-morrow, and prepare to leave for sea. She will probably be off in two or three days. Annexed is a list of her officers:

... WORDEN, Commander; Chas. H. CADMUS, Lieutenant Commander and Executive Officer; Pierre GRAYSON, Master; J. J. McKINLEY and G. F. AVERY, Lieutenants; S. F. STEVENS, Assistant Paymaster; S. N. ... Assistant Surgeon; Robert Potts, Second Assistant, Acting Chief Engineer; G. Stevens, Second Assistant Engineer; F. F. Carney and G. H. Greene, Third Assistant Engineers.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

How the Mammoth Ship was Repaired—Visit of the Board of Underwriters—Their Certificate of Her Seaworthiness.

On the 7th of last August, when the Great Eastern was endeavoring to make this port by way of the Sound, off Montauk Point she struck on a sunken rock not noted down in any chart, and tore a fracture in her outer skin of such dimensions as to make it doubtful whether she could be trusted in that state on her voyage home. In all probability she could have made the voyage well enough, for her inner skin was untouched, and so long as that is sound the vessel remains perfectly seaworthy.

It will be remembered that the Great Eastern is in fact two vessels distant skins, one inside the other, with a space of two feet nine inches between the inner and exterior skins. This space is honeycombed crosswise and lengthwise into upwards of 400 cells. These cells are intended to be so many water-tight compartments, adding to the buoyancy of the ship when submerged, and acting as a series of docks in case any particular part should have a hole knocked in it. They would have acted in this way and have saved the ship from material damage when she struck the rock off Montauk Point, but a mistake had occurred on the part of her builders. It appears that, in putting up the walls of the cells, apertures had to be left for the workmen to pass from one other then had started the recess side of the plates. Each aperture should have been closed as the work progressed, but it was not done. Somehow, they were all left open; consequently, when the outer skin was rent, all the space between it and the inner skin filled with water, sinking the ship over five feet, rendering her apt to lurch and unmanage, while in anything like rough weather. Some idea of the effect, which this sudden influx of East River water must have upon the mighty craft may be imagined when it is known that, since the stoppage of the leak, nearly four thousand tons of the intrusive element have poured from her.

Rather than take the risk of sending her to sea in this condition, the agents interested in her had her towed here if possible. At a general consultation of engineers the felicitious device which has since been adopted was admirably ... and it was resolved to let them try what they could do. The plan and the mode of carrying it out have already been detailed in these columns.

The Board of Underwriters conferred together yesterday, and took counsel with the Captain, and then drew up and proceeded to the Agents of the Great Eastern Company, the following certificate:

We, the undersigned, having carefully examined the Great Eastern, and the repairs, which have been done in a scientific and workmanlike manner, are of opinion that she is in every way seaworthy and in a condition to carry passengers with safety and comfort, and a full cargo of any description, to any port of the world, from the nature of her cargo and stowage, and the state of the weather and season of the year, with the ordinary precautions and care of Masters of Steamers.

We further certify that we consider the precautions taken by the Agents of the Great Eastern, in the event of her meeting with any accident, to be sufficient to insure her safety, and that the means on board for clearing her of water, and for ascertaining the different leaks, know the exact position of the vessel when she struck on the submerged rock, not laid down in any chart, though in the vicinity of Montauk Point.

ROBERT MAGEE, Agent for Lloyd's.
WM. H. BURNHAM, President of the Board of Port Wardens.
C. H. SCHLEIER, Port Warden.
WM. P. THOMPSON, Vice-President Neptune Insurance Company.
ERASTUS W. SMITH, Engineer.
REES. HUTCHINGS, Port Warden.
JOHN M. WEBB, United States Inspector of Hulls.
CHARLES H. HASWELL, Surveyor to the Board of Underwriters.

The company then sat down to dinner, after which toasts were drank and many telling little speeches were given.

The President's health was drunk and Queen VICTORIA's and Capt. FAYCE's, the Messrs. ERICSSON, Mr. ASPINWALL's, and plenty more. Between 6 and 7 o'clock the company broke up, and underwriters, reporters, and promiscuous guests returned to the steamer Nemesis, on which the trip had been made. The Nemesis sailed around the great ship, and those aboard exchanged exhilarating good-byes with the officers and men whose hospitality they had been enjoying. The band played "Hail Columbia," and "Yankee Doodle," the British tars rang out three cheers for the Union, and then as much haste home was made as possible.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Estimates of County Expenses for 1859—Another Vote on Harlem Bridge—The Former Vote Overruled—The New Court-house—Prospect of Several More Votes—Aids to the City Judge.

The Board of Supervisors met at 3 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, President FOSTER in the Chair.

The Comptroller's estimate of county expenses for 1859 were submitted and referred. The following are the items:

THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Advertising	$23,000 00
Care and Maintenance of Coles' (Third-avenue) Bridge	750 00
County Contingencies	40,000 00
Election Expenses	64,000 00
Lighting and Cleaning and Supplies for County Offices	26,000 00
Printing, Stationery and Blank Books	50,000 00
Repairs to County Buildings and Offices	9,000 00
Salaries—Legislative Department	4,400 00
Support of Prisoners in the County Jail	4,000 00
Total	$200,750 00

THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

The following veto message from the Mayor was received and laid over under the rule:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Dec. 10, 1858.

To the Honorable the Board of Supervisors:

GENTLEMEN: I must respectfully disapproved the accompanying resolution, providing for the payment of certain bills incurred in the work of the reconstruction of Harlem Bridge.

My objection to these is the same as stated in my communication to your honorable body returning bills of a similar character, under date of the 20th ult. I have also another objection which had not at that time been brought to my notice. The act passed April 17, 1861, (chap. 291,) as I view it, limits the cost of the bridge to the sum of $350,000, therein named. The actual expenditure has, however, largely exceeded this amount, having already reached the sum of $377,152 55, exclusive of anything which may have been paid by Westchester County. It would seem from this that the present outlays on the bridge are unwarranted by law, and that before proceeding further with them it will be necessary to obtain additional authority from the Legislature.

The other objection stated in my former communication of Nov. 20, the basis to force as the expenditure for this costly bridge enlarges; and I would respectfully urge again upon your honorable body that the Supervisors of Westchester County be required to reimburse to us their share of the cost of the bridge, which we have thus far advanced for them.

GEORGE OPDYDE, Mayor.

A resolution by Mr. TWEED, directing the Special Committee on the New Court-house to proceed with that work, with power to employ men, buy materials and make contracts, (the last named acts to be approved by the Board,) elicited considerable discussion.

Messrs. PURDY, ELY and BURNS said it was unnecessary to pass it, as the action of the Board already taken on the subject was sufficient authority for the Committee to go ahead with the work.

Mr. TWEED was anxious that it should pass, because the Mayor would veto the former action, and very likely also veto this resolution. As the veto would have to lie over ten days in each case, before the Board could overrule them, the sooner they moved in the matter the better, if it were desired that the work on the Court-house building should be resumed as early as practicable.

Messrs. ELY and PURDY failed in repeated efforts to amend the resolution, which finally passed by 8 to 4.

A resolution to grant City Judge McCUNN an extra temporary clerk and a messenger, at a salary of $600 each, was opposed by Mr. BURNS, but was adopted notwithstanding.

The former veto of the Mayor on the resolution to pay a lot of Harlem Bridge bills was taken up and overruled.

The Board adjourned till 3 o'clock P. M. of next Thursday.

Brooklyn Art Association.

The third season of the Brooklyn Art Association opens on the 19th inst. The first reception of the season, under the accustomed management of the regular Committee with the Secretary, Mr. JOHN WILLIAMSON, will be held on the evening of the 18th, on which occasion a collection of paintings, principally by native artists, will be exhibited, choice music ... [illegible] ... Recollections Concerning the Great Eastern.—The party of gentlemen on their return trip from their visit to the Great Eastern, on Monday of this week, organized into a meeting by calling Mr. P. H. WALL to the Chair, and appointing Captain COTTON Secretary. After a brief statement of the object of the meeting by the Chairman, Mr. COTTON offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the meeting are hereby tendered to Capt. FAYCE, of the Great Eastern, for a day of delightful entertainment, and for an opportunity of examining the curious and novel plan by which the gigantic task of repairing his ship's bottom on the outside, 16 feet below the surface of the water, and while the ship was afloat, has been successfully accomplished.

Resolved, That the Messrs. HENRY S. ERICSSON and EDWARD S. ERICSSON, Engineers, of New-York, in devising and successfully carrying out the plan of effecting these repairs, have exhibited an amount of ingenuity, skill and learning, which renders them an honor to the profession to which they belong.

Resolved, That the judgment and foresight of Capt. FAYCE, evinced by his ready comprehension and prompt execution of the plans and contrivances of the engineers, and his untiring energy and cordial cooperation in carrying them out, show him eminently qualified for the high and distinguished command which he holds.

The Redemption of Soiled Postage-Stamps.

The redemption in this City of the soiled postage-stamps, which have been used as currency, proved to be a very large undertaking. Already about five hundred persons have presented their "gum-backs" at the Post-office to be redeemed, or for the inspection which is necessary previous to redemption. Scarcely more than a fourth of the applicants bring packages of less value than $5, and in such cases the stamps are received, counted and redeemed at once, while some of the packages containing over five dollars' worth of stamps, all of which are left for assorting and counting, reach the high valuation of one thousand dollars.

A low estimate of the value of the stamps received day before yesterday would be $50,000, and the amount that will be offered yesterday may reach $25,000 or $30,000. Packages containing hundreds of dollars' worth of stamps are not uncommon; and the number of persons in waiting with their bundles of the worn-out "currency," and who range themselves in long perplexing lines inside the spacious Post-office inclosure, is constantly thereening. No fear need, however, be entertained that there will be a lack of time in which to present the stamps for redemption; for the arrangements now made, and which may be made, if necessary, in the thirty days allowed by the Department for their deposit, would be quite ample for the receiving of as many stamps as were circulated in half the Union.

The Accident at Hecker's Bakery.

RESULT OF THE CORONER'S INVESTIGATION.

It will be remembered by our readers that on the evening of the 10th of November last, the rear walls of HECKER's new Bakery, five stories in height, situated at No. 58 Rutgers-street, suddenly fell, and buried under the ruins a family whose dwelling was a small house directly in the rear. A child about eight months old was crushed to death, and other members of the family seriously injured. Coroner NAUMANN immediately impanneled a jury, and commenced an inquest upon the body of the child, but, after the examination of several witnesses, it was found necessary to adjourn the inquisition for the purpose of spading laborers to clear away the rubbish, to the end that it might be ascertained whether the proprietors, or those having charge of the construction of the building, had been guilty of negligence.

Yesterday the Coroner concluded the inquest, when the Jury rendered the following verdict, viz: That ANGELIKA SEARBOCK came to her death by injuries accidently received from the falling of a stack of ovens on the dwelling of which deceased was an occupant, in the rear of No. 58 Rutgers-street, on the tenth day of November last. The Jury believe that the immediate cause of the accident, was owing to the unequal settling of the side walls, occasioned by use of them being dried during construction, from the heat of the ovens in the adjoining building. We further believe that the accident might have been avoided by the use of iron cross-ties to prevent the spreading of the arches on which the ovens were built; the omission of which we consider to have been an error of judgment on the part of the builders; the unequal drying of the walls being an unforeseen occurrence."

Another Chapter in the Late Silk Robbery.

ARREST OF TWO MORE OF THE REPUTED BURGLARS—MORE OF THE PROPERTY RECOVERED—AN ALLEGED RECEIVER IN CUSTODY.

The day following the breaking into the store of Messrs. AUTHOBAND, HIBERNESS & Co., No. 146 Duane-street, and the stealing therefrom of $15,000 worth of silks, Officer RICHARD KING, of the Essex Market Police Court, received information which led him to suspect one GEORGE FORBES, living at No. 76 Forsyth-street, as being implicated in the burglary. FORBES has been previously suspected of such crimes, and the Police have frequently apprehended him. Mr. KING and Officer WEDE, of the Tenth Precinct, accordingly commenced an investigation, and ascertained that FORBES and one WM. PETERS had, last Saturday, hired a room in the tenement house, No. 210 Elm-street. Upon searching the apartments the officers discovered remnants of wrappers which had been taken from pieces of silks and partially burned in the grate. After this clue was obtained, the officers went in search of FORBES and PETERS and at length they were found, and their every movement watched till yesterday morning, when they were traced to the jewelry establishment of CHARLES JACOBS, No. 181 East Broadway. As they left the house the suspected parties were arrested, and on searching them, $600 in current funds was found in their possession.

JACOBS was next apprehended, and he subsequently confessed that he had purchased twenty-one pieces of black dress-silk goods from two young men, for which he paid them $400 in cash. They wanted $700 for the goods, but finally concluded to take the sum paid. The silks in question, found in JACOBS' store, and valued at about $2,000, were seized by Officer KING, and taken to Court. Two other pieces of similar silk were found in possession of Mame Jameson, No. 76 Forsyth-street; that also being the residence of the prisoner FORBES. MAMIE having the silks secreted under a sofa, was also arrested. It was thought on Sunday, by the Fourteenth Ward Police, that all the stolen silk had been recovered, but the sequel shows how much they were mistaken. The room in Elm-street, where the goods were first taken, is only a few steps from the Fourteenth Precinct Police Station, and it was while conveying them from this place to Forsyth-street, that the burglars' wagon broke down and they were compelled to place their costly freight into an area in Centre-street to avoid detection and arrest. Much credit is due to Officers KING and WEDE for the sagacity and skill displayed by them in so successfully working up the case. All the prisoners are held for examination before Justice OSBORNE.

The Medical Director's Department in this City.

One of the most busy departments of the military service just now is that of the Medical Director, Surgeon McDOUGALL. Most of the hospitals under his charge are full, and with the exception of Fort Schuyler, Governor's Island, and a few other smaller hospitals, no more sick and wounded can be accommodated. There are at present over seven thousand under treatment. This morning Surgeon-General McDOUGALL received a dispatch from Washington stating that five hundred sick had left that city at 5 o'clock on Monday evening. Not a word was said as to whether they had left by water or rail, and consequently the Director scarcely knows where or when to expect their arrival. He is run down nearly by applicants for discharge, some on the ground, and others without the Surgeon's certificate.

Since the 1st of July there have been discharged in this Department alone, over [illegible] ... in granting discharges to all ... active service ... surgeons do not, and have not, used proper discretion in passing men for duty. The system of allowing regiments en route for the seat of war to lay over in these large cities, also helps to fill up our hospitals, as the men contract syphilitic diseases, and are, of course, subjects for discharge. Scarcely a regiment stops over five but is more or less afflicted with measles, mumps, and other local diseases, helping to fill up the hospitals.

It is expected that between now and Saturday some 1,000 or 1,500 more sick and wounded will arrive from Washington, which, together with those just discharged at Fredericksburgh, of whom New-York will receive her quota, will so overcrowd them as to perhaps necessitate the use of public buildings. There is an abundance of excellent nurses and Doctors, so that the sick and wounded are sure of good treatment.

Action on Insurance Policy—Plaintiff, the Abettor—Not Brown.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART II.

Before Justice Mitchell.

E. M. Brown vs. The Kings County Fire Insurance Company.—This action is brought to recover $1,000, with interest from January, 1860. A fire occurred in the plaintiff's drug store, in December, 1860. His loss he claims was $4,000, and a little upward. The amount covered by the insurance was only $1,000. At the time the fire occurred, the plaintiff was engaged in warming on the stove (at his premises No. [illegible]) a quantity of oil-meal, for the purpose of putting it in small parcels, when a leg of the stove broke, the stove tumbled over, and the fire spread rapidly. The Company claimed that the plaintiff, by heating the oil-meal on the stove, violated the plaintiff's policy. The plaintiff claims that, as he did not manufacture the article on the premises insured, but in a rear building, the mere heating of the oil-meal did not vitiate the policy. The plaintiff, it will be remembered, is the Doctor who is charged with procuring an abortion upon Miss Anderson. The case was tried before the Court without a jury. Decision reserved.

Henry L. Clinton and J. C. Van Loon for plaintiff; E. L. Fancher and Mr. Parsons for defendant.

Commissions for Chartering Steamers to the Government—A Singular Misunderstanding.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Barnard.

Russell Sturgis vs. Paul Spofford et al.—The plaintiff in this action, as alleged, had rendered services to the defendants as an agent and broker in procuring the employment by the Government of the steamship Marion, of which the defendants are agents and owners. Plaintiff claimed that the defendants agreed to pay him 2½ per cent. on the amount obtained from the Government for the use of the vessel—which was $105,000. That he presented an bill for commissions, a claim for $6,300, $2,000 of which he received, but the defendants declined to pay the balance of $2,300.

For this sum he now brought action.

The defendants claimed that they had employed the plaintiff to do the chartering of the ship, and denied that they had ever held out to the Government without the plaintiff's knowledge or cooperation. It was also denied that the plaintiff had ever been paid $2,000, as alleged in the complaint, in the matter.

No verdict as yet. Jury being out.

Romey, Butler & Parsons for plaintiff; Sohen, Dean & Beardsley for defendants.

An Action for Negligence in Leaving a Coal-Hole Open.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Monell.

Amelia Collins vs. William Mesier.—This was an action brought by plaintiff for damages for injuries received, as she claimed, by falling into a vault or "coal-hole," left carelessly unfastened by defendant's tenants. The plaintiff, who was pregnant at the time, sustained great injury, and thereby, as is alleged, gave birth to a still-born child.

The defendant, in answer, avers that previous to the accident the house had been declared to be in good order, and that prior to the alleged injury, had no knowledge or received any notice of the danger of such gaping.

Plaintiff claims $5,000 damages. The trial now resulted in a verdict for plaintiff, and assesses the damages at $500.

Birdseye & Hadley for plaintiff; W. Bloomfield for defendant.

[illegible]

Morris vs. Combe.—The plaintiff being convicted in an alleged riotous strike for higher wages from the Manhattan Gas-Light Company, was arrested by the defendant and detained over night in a Station-house.

The plaintiff now complains against the false imprisonment.

Mr. Edwin James, in opening the case for the plaintiff, alluded to the law of combination of workmen to raise their wages, and said that any number of them had as much right to meet for the purpose of raising their wages peaceably, as the directors of the Manhattan Gas Company had the right to raise the price of gas to the consumers. After a long struggle the right had been obtained for the workmen in England, and the law repealed. Counsel moved that it was given that the plaintiff was arrested without any warrant, and was confined for one night in the Station-house, when he was let out upon bail.

The defendant swore positively that he gave no order for the plaintiff's arrest, and he was corroborated by the police sergeant. After the Judge had summed up the case the jury, after an hour's deliberation, gave a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages $75.

Edwin James and Thomas Dunphy for the plaintiff; E. H. Anthon for defendant.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

Ireland vs. Lovell et al.; Germania Fire Insurance Company vs. Meyhew et al.; The Same vs. The Same; Brady vs. Forts et al.—Judgments ordered.

Ducert vs. Delacroix.—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

Hamilton vs. Ward et al.—Motion denied.

Before Justice Bacon.

Roberts et al. vs. Howell.—Motion granted.

Ferry vs. Weekes et al.—Judgment granted, unless to sell.

In the Matter of the Petitioners Caroline F. McKenzie.—Order granted.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Sutherland.

Bray vs. Thomas.—Order for substitution granted, but not for delivery of papers, &c., except as stated in the memoranda on the papers.

Hence vs. Day.—Motion to dismiss the complaint in this action granted, with $10 costs of this motion.

Hencken vs. Hencken.—Motion granted.

Before Justice Barbour.

Cock vs. Palmer.—Decision on file in Clerk's office.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The Army of the Potomac is once more on the south side of the Rappahannock, and the relative positions of the opposing forces are now the same as on Wednesday of last week. During Monday night, in the midst of a heavy wind and rain storm, the troops overturned their positions on the Fredericksburg side of the river, undiscovered, and unmolested by the enemy. The movement was started to cross, and the last of the rear guard brought up the next shortly after daylight, and we have, at the last most was over quietly, the pontoon bridges were removed, there existed of all communication between the two shores, the wounded were all safely brought over.

There seems to be now, no room to doubt that the rebel retreat has gone further south than Hull's Cross-Roads. A letter from Fort Royal, S. C., dated the 10th inst., states that it passed there on the preceding Monday.

It is reported by the English steamer Cadmus, arrived at Fortress Monroe, that a large fleet was seen by her entering Cape Fear River, N. C. The rebel papers recently contained a statement that a fleet had left Hilton Head, and Wilmington was supposed by them to be its destination.

Advices from the Southwest are interesting. Gen. HOVEY's expedition has returned to Helena, having been perfectly successful in the enterprise in which it was engaged, and with trifling loss. Gen. SHERMAN had returned with his command to Memphis, his cooperation with Gen. GRANT being no longer necessary. The latter is reported still at Oxford with his forces, and an immediate advance is not expected. The rebel force is said to be between Jackson and Canton, in the rear of Vicksburg. A party of guerrillas burned the steamer Lake City at Concordia, Ark., on Monday of last week, and in retaliation a United States force burned the next day destroyed forty-two houses in the place.

A band of rebels, numbering 2,000, was surprised on Saturday at Tuscumbia, on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad east of Corinth, and completely routed, by two regiments of National cavalry, after a skirmish of cavalry. This is a slight compensation for the disaster at Hartsville.

The Utica Republican, of Saturday last, says: "Gen. McCLELLAN received at headquarters, today, Anson Bartlett, artist, sent by the Illustrated Newspapers to sketch the battle of Prairie Grove, and the decisive news of the victory to the Union arms. The loss on both sides is also thought to be much greater than was at first supposed. The fighting was desperate to the extreme. Gen. BLUNT states that, in one place, within the space of two acres, 250 of our own and the enemy's dead were found." All but twelve of the prisoners taken during the fight, including two commissioned officers, refused to be paroled, on return to the rebel army, and 150 came into the Union camp after the fight and gave themselves up. Hundreds were on the road between the two armies, going to surrender to the Union forces. Demoralization and despair characterized the rebel army after the battle. The death of Gen. HERSE, of Missouri, is confirmed. No additional list of killed and wounded has been received. The enemy admit a loss of 2,500 killed and wounded. The latest intelligence from the Southwest is to the effect that HINDMAN, with his forces, was falling back to the vicinity of Little Rock, where a force of some 18,000 men is stationed, under the command of Gen. HERMAN. The rebel force is said to be at Austin, 25 miles south of Little Rock.

The steamer Y. Chapin, of Provincetown, Mass., first reported by the bark Wales, which was burned by the Alabama, states that the latter vessel had about fifty characters on board which had been taken from captured vessels. Three or four days before arriving at Martinique, the Alabama made a strange exit, and have down upon her and boarded. When it was found that she was an English bark, bound from Demarara to London, she was allowed to go unmolested. Mr. ATKINS, who found means for frequent communication with some of the Alabama's crew, represents them to be very much dissatisfied and constantly grumbling at their lot. This feeling seems to be already strong enough to excite them to open mutiny the first opportunity. It is said that the Alabama returned to Martinique and cooled from a British bark, after the Gen. Jackson left.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a message was received from the President, placing at the disposal of the Secretary of the Navy, forwarded to him by Hon. BOYLEN. The President suggests that if the swords should be given as rewards for honorable services, Gen. BOYLEN is entitled to the first consideration. Resolutions introduced by Mr. McDOUGALL, of California, relative to the payment of interest and Customs duties in coin, were referred to the Finance Committee. A bill for the relief of sufferers by the Indian massacres in Minnesota was referred; also a bill providing for the removal of the Indians from the State. The President was called upon for correspondence relating to the cultivation of cotton in Asia Minor and Egypt. The resolution censuring Ex-President BUCHANAN was taken up, but after some debate it was laid on the table. The bill concerning the arrest of State prisoners was postponed until to-day. The resolution concerning the arrest of certain citizens of Delaware was laid on the table, as the subject is embraced in the general bill. The death of Hon. LUTHER HANCHETT, late Representative from Wisconsin, was announced, and after the usual proceedings the Senate adjourned.

In the House, a message was received from the President, relative to the swords of Gen. TWIGGS, similar to the one sent to the Senate. The resolutions introduced by Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, declaring that the Union must remain undivided, etc., were postponed at his request three weeks. The Secretary of the Treasury was called upon for information regarding the United States Loans. A bill for the removal of the Indians from Minnesota was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. The West Point Academy appropriation bill was passed. The death of Mr. HANCHETT was then announced, and the House soon afterward adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen met at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the resolution to give the Sixty-ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. N. G., the sum of $10,000, was adopted, and also the resolution to procure a portrait of Ex-Gov. MYRON H. CLARK, at an expense of $1,000. Mr. ALLEN made a very earnest effort to have the Finance Committee discharged from consideration of the ordinance passed by the Councilmen, ordering a further issue of Central Park stock. He urged that the Committee ought to be requested to investigate the alleged improper management of the Park Commission, or else report upon the question of issuing more stock. Mr. BOOLE said the Committee had proceeded so far as to order notices printed for summoning witnesses, and would soon go ahead with the investigation. Mr. ALLEN's motion was lost by 12 to 1. The Board adjourned till 5 o'clock P. M. to-day.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and spent some time in acting upon routine papers. The most important piece of business transacted was the adoption of the resolution in favor of increasing the salary of the Deputy Street Commissioner to $5,000 per annum. It is understood that the Mayor has signified his intention of vetoing all increases of salary voted by the present Common Council. The Board adjourned till 4 o'clock P. M. to-day.

The Board of Supervisors had an important meeting at 3 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The Comptroller's estimates of county expenses for the year 1863, were submitted and referred. The total amount is $5,145,777 26, of which $647,600 is set down as the probable income from fees, etc., leaving $5,181,177 06 to be raised by tax. Another vote on a batch of Harlem Bridge bills came in, and was laid over. The Mayor quotes the act of April, 1861, as limiting the additional cost of the work to $250,000, in further justification of his vetoes. The Board took up and overruled the former vote. There was a lively discussion over a resolution by Mr. TWEED, empowering the new Court-house Committee to employ men, buy materials, and make contracts, (the last-mentioned acts to be approved by the Board,) on proceeding with the work of construction. It was finally passed by 8 to 4. Mr TWEED said the Mayor would vote all their action regarding the taking back of that work into their own hands. City Judge McCUNN was voted a temporary clerk and a messenger, at a salary each of $600 per annum. Adjourned till 3 o'clock P. M. of Thursday.

The Councilmanic Railroad Committee are to meet again at 2 o'clock P. M. to-day, to continue the investigation into the alleged illegal assumptions of authority by the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company.

In the Manual prepared usually by the Clerk of the Assembly, the members elect are classified politically, as follows:

Democrats	63	Union Republicans	10
Union	1	Republicans	46
Union Democrats	8
Total			128

A small lot of prize cotton was sold in Philadelphia, on Monday, for 70 cents per pound. Some turpentine brought $2 40 per gallon.

A side-wheel steamer, 240 feet long, 35 feet wide, and 12 feet deep, for service in Southern rivers and harbors, is now building in Boston, and will be launched about April 1.

The Providence Journal states that the bids for the loan of six hundred thousand dollars, advertised for by the State Treasurer of Rhode Island, amounted to about sixteen hundred thousand dollars. It was awarded to parties in Providence, Boston and Worcester at 3 26-100 premium and upward. The Revere Bank of Boston took $100,000 at 109.26; Jackson & Butts, of Providence, $100,000 at 109.3 to 109.5, and Hartshorn, of Worcester, $2000 at 109.5 to 109.

The Detmold steam mills at Atlanta, Illinois, are now running with corn for fuel instead of wood, that article being cheaper, and more easily obtained than either wood or coal.

In Wall-street, yesterday, Gold rose 1 ⅌ cent, on the unfavorable War news, and although Stocks were at first depressed they subsequently rallied under a large speculative demand on the Share list, and left off firm.

Breadstuffs were in more demand, and prices toward the close, favored sellers. Provisions were in moderate request at former figures. A fair inquiry prevailed for Hay, Hops, Tallow and Foreign Liquors. Light sales were reported of Cotton, Groceries, Fish, Fruit, Hemp, Hides, Leather, Oils, Iron, Lead, Wool and Tobacco. More extensive freight engagements were effected.

The Live Stock markets are crowded with cattle and hogs this week. There is also an abundant supply of sheep for the wants of buyers, though the numbers are not large. Some extra fat cattle and sheep have been sent in for the approaching holidays, and found ready purchasers at high prices. Beeves number 6,376 all told, which, with the single exception of one week in September is the largest supply of any previous market during 1862. Of this number, 5,256 were offered at Forty-fourth-street on Monday and Tuesday, and nearly all were disposed of, generally at a decline of ½c. from the previous week. Trade was brisk Monday A. M., quiet P. M., and decidedly dull Tuesday, at declining rates. A few choice cattle were in the yards sold at good prices, at high figures—10c.@11c. and even 12½c. ⅌ lb. for the net weight of the four quarters. After these came a small number of good cattle, too few for the wants of butchers who require a better grade of cattle to compete with Christmas turkey. This class sold at 8½c.@9c. Scallawags were plenty and "dog-cheap," ranging from 4c. to 7c. ⅌ lb.... Sheep numbers 6,671 head, and are selling slowly at 8c.@8½c. ⅌ head below last week's rates. A few extra fat sheep, of large size, were sold at $15@$18 each.... Live Hogs exceed in numbers the great supply of Dec. 2, when we announced the largest number ever received in a single week. They now foot up 53,776, and are selling readily at 5c.@5½c. for prime corn-fed, and 4c. for stillhogs.

THE BANKS EXPEDITION.—The curiosity of the public in regard to the destination of Gen. BANKS, is still in lively exercise. The interest was cheerful at first—but since yesterday noon it has grown rapidly and fiercely cardonic. The hope that his picked and formidable force of twenty thousand men would turn up in dangerous contiguity to Richmond—that it was to play an immediate and important part in the capture of that town, which may fall in all the hills for the holidays—that at least and at farthest it would join in an effective blow at the rebel southern line of communication, North Carolina—this hope—these hopes—have perished; and we fall back exhausted, upon that profound witticism of the Secretary of War, that "BANKS would land in a good place!" Perhaps he will. Galveston Island, on the Texas coast, should be recaptured. It is a good place. Powder-Horn Bay, two hundred miles further on, is also a place much beset by rebels, that deserves Governmental attention. It is "a good place." Brownsville, Texas, covers much contraband trade, and should be looked after by some of our numerous expeditions. It is "a very good place."

BANKS may have gone to some of these. The people conclude he has. But of one thing they are quite sure—that from appearances he has not gone where he can do one particle of service to the country in the crisis of battle. He did not go either to Fredericksburg or—Richmond. We imagine these are bad places for Union expeditions to approach.

The Recrossing of the Rappahannock by Our Army.

The public were startled to learn by telegraph yesterday that the army of Gen. BURNSIDE had, under cover of the darkness of Monday night, returned to this side of the river which it had so triumphantly crossed last Thursday and Friday. No one could divine the reason for this movement. If the operations which had been represented as in progress of execution were really going on—if an army were ready to attack Richmond in the rear—if the Grand Division of SIGEL were in the very act of effecting a junction with the other three grand divisions at Fredericksburgh—if the heavy reinforcements which had been sent from Washington and elsewhere, were constantly increasing BURNSIDE's strength—if the battle of Saturday were only a reconnoissance in force by less than a moiety of BURNSIDE's troops, followed by no disastrous results—and especially if, as was represented, the battle were on the very eve of being renewed on a more stupendous scale—why should he bring back his entire army to this side of the Rappahannock, when the successful crossing of that river, four days before, had been held up as one of the greatest achievements of the war? Could it be that there was a hitch somewhere in the carrying out of the plan of operations? Could it be that there was no such plan as the grand one of which we had had intimations, and which had furnished a theme for public eulogy for some days? Could it be that BURNSIDE had learned from his so-called reconnoissance that the enemy's works were too strong to be carried by assault? Was it possible that the accounts we had had by telegraph of Saturday's battle were grossly false, and that our army had suffered a disastrous repulse on that day, instead of meeting with the hopeful degree of success which had encouraged the public. Every one had his own conjecture in the premises. But no one could bode from the movement anything cheerful or hopeful; and the firm and courageous feeling of the previous day was changed into one of depression and gloom.

We think the full and detailed letter of our Virginia correspondent, penned upon the field of battle, but published only this morning, as its transmission to us was delayed by causes beyond our control, will help to clear up the mystery of Gen. BURNSIDE's sudden and unexpected movement to this side of the Rappahannock. That letter shows us that the battle of Saturday was a far greater action than had been supposed—that in fact, it was in most respects the greatest battle of the war—that the whole of BURNSIDE's Army (excepting the column of SIGEL up the river,) was engaged; and, we are sorry to say, it shows that we met with a repulse, but temporary in its effects we believe, but still very much more grievous, general, and disastrous than we had been officially led to suppose. To that letter we refer those who desire to obtain a comprehensive view of the fierce and tremendous engagement that raged from morning till night of Saturday last on the south bank of the Rappahannock.

The public, of course, will feel very much discouraged at the sight of the picture which reveals itself to their gaze. The scene opened so finely on Thursday, that they expected it would continue to be illuminated with glory until the arrival of the expected hour when our fluttering banners should be borne into Richmond with the sweep of a hundred and fifty thousand gallant soldiers of the Union. But instead of this, the brightness of Thursday darkens into the carnage and gore of Saturday; and to-day we behold our great army, its banners drooping and dripping with blood, encamped on the spot from which, less than a brief week ago, it started out on its work of conquest.

It is discouraging, and none but a fool would attempt to conceal it.

We have learnt from the work of Saturday that the special mode of operation adopted on that occasion was essentially vicious, and we have no desire to see our men again dashed wildly against impregnable fortified works. Strategy, we should suppose, would furnish other means of getting to Richmond, destroying the rebel army, and quelling the rebellion, than this. Under the circumstances, the withdrawal of our army from the "trap" of Fredericksburgh to their present unassailable position on the north bank was the wisest step that could have been taken. It will be seen that the movement was anticipated by our correspondent as the inevitable result of the battle of Saturday.

What now? What next? We know not. We know nothing of HALLECK's plans, or of the plans of Gen. BURNSIDE, or of the President. We have still, however, our army; we have still our imperative and inexorable work. That army, we believe, with proper leadership, is still ample for the work. The repulse, we know, is and must be—but for a moment. If we have not, at this essay, gained our end, we are but repulsed—with greater determination that we shall succeed. To our heroic brothers, who bore the brunt of that tremendous day, we still look for one more effort that shall redeem the country. The country owes it to itself to give encouragement to the soldiers.

Attorney-General Bates on the Dred Scott Decision.

Attorney-General BATES, in a case officially submitted to him, has pronounced that the law confining the command of American coasters to American citizens, does not exclude colored mariners. This is equivalent to declaring that black men may be citizens of the United States, and that the dicta to the contrary in the Dred Scott case are incorrect. We say the dicta and not the decision itself. The majority of the Court never decided that colored men cannot be citizens. What they decided was, that the record showed a disability on the part of DRED SCOTT to maintain the suit, because he was no citizen—nobody but a citizen being allowed to sue in a United States Court. Only three of them, TANEY, WAYNE and DANIEL, held that he was not a citizen for the reason that he was a black man. The other members of the majority forebore to touch this point, and confined themselves to the argument that SCOTT was no citizen, because the record showed him a slave. McLEAN and CURTIS held that the record did not so show, and that his being a black man, simply did not make him any the less a citizen. We therefore say that it is not the Dred Scott decision which Attorney-General BATES now controverses, but the positions of the three Judges, who constituted only a third of the Court.

The written opinion of the Attorney-General has not yet been made public, but undoubtedly is marked with all his characteristic clearness. We trust it will put forever at rest the gross misconceptions that have existed respecting American citizenship—misconceptions that demagogues have long been in the habit of turning to the worst account. Say that the free negro is a citizen, and the imagination of tens of thousands at once conjure up dreadful visions of negro equality. It is taken for granted, that if a citizen, he must be a voter, and be entitled to every civil privilege. The idea is preposterous. Citizenship has nothing to do with voting. Every American woman is a citizen, and yet no American woman votes. The child that was born an hour ago, of the most poverty-stricken American parents, is a citizen—just as much a citizen as the lordliest millionaire in the land in the prime of life. The woman does not vote, the child does not vote; nor need the colored man, though he, too, is a citizen, if free and native born.

Men talk of the elective franchise, but constantly forget its meaning. The very definition of a franchise is a right granted, in distinction from a right inherent. In respect to suffrage, the right is granted by the Constitution, and as this grant changes, the right changes. There is not a State in the Union in which the grant is not a qualified one. It is extended only to those of a certain age and certain residence; women are excluded from it; in most of the States colored men and paupers are excluded from it; in Connecticut those who cannot read and write are excluded from it; in some of the States those who do not own a certain amount of property, or a certain description of property, are excluded from it. Each State, through its Constitution, controls the matter as it likes. It can extend the franchise or curtail it as it chooses. This power is inseparable from the State sovereignty, and belongs to that sovereignty exclusively. The National Government has nothing to do with it. Congress can make citizens through its laws of naturalization, but it cannot make voters. There are naturalized people who cannot vote; there are non-naturalized people who can vote. In many of the Western States foreigners legally vote after one or two years' stay in the country, though by the National laws a stay of five years is necessary for naturalization. The question whether colored men shall vote or not is purely a State question, and in no capacity has the National Government anything to do with it. The opinion of the Attorney-General will have and can have no more bearing upon that matter than a chapter in the Alcoran.

If we are asked what practical advantages the black man can gain by a reversal of the Dred Scott dicta, we shall answer that they must be small at most. It simply confers upon his race a few inconsiderable rights, like that of commanding vessels, that of obtaining passports, and that of suing in the National Courts, which not one in a hundred thousand of them would ever exercise. So far as the great fundamental rights are concerned—the rights of life, liberty and property—the condition of the free black man becomes no better by his being a citizen. He has always been protected in those rights, like any other individual in the community, whether a citizen or not. Chief-Justice TANEY, in declaring that "black men had no rights which white men were bound to respect," uttered a libel upon every State of the Union; for there was not one of them, Slave or Free, which had not enacted laws for the protection of life and liberty and property, applicable, either in partial or in full measure, to free black men as well as to white. The assertion was as false historically, as it was unjustifiable morally. It was prompted, doubtless, by a desire to give a sort of judicial sanction to the modern doctrine that Slavery is a divine institution, for which all black men were intended; but it was couched in such extravagant phrase that it was impossible for any man of the slightest intelligence to be deceived by it.

Though the opinion of the Attorney-General confer very little positive benefit upon the black man, it is yet valuable as tending to remove the stigma brought upon American jurisprudence by the extra-judicial doctrines put forth by Chief-Justice TANEY and his fellow-devotees of Slavery in the Dred Scott case. The indignation excited by those doctrines contributed much to the overthrow of the old Pro-Slavery rule; and it was hoped and expected that the present Administration would purge the Government of all recognition of them, on the first fair opportunity. This, so far as regards one of the two most flagitious doctrines, is now done by the elaborate and conclusive opinion of the Attorney-General on the case submitted by the Treasury Department. The other—namely, that the Constitution by its own force carries Slavery into all the Territories—Congress has already wiped out by its law positively and forever interdicting Slavery in any Territory whatsoever.

Retrograde in the Southwest.

We confess to a total lack of appreciation of Union strategy in the Southwest. The telegraph tells us briefly that Gen. SHERMAN has returned to Memphis, Gen. HOVEY has returned to Helena, Gen. GRANT pauses at Oxford, Miss.—and "an immediate advance is not expected." Gen. HOVEY was famously gazetted quite recently for having captured Grenada, Miss.—one of the most valuable railroad centres of the rebels. But sober truth overslaughed this cheerful bulletin and killed it. Gen. HOVEY's Cavalry did not come within six miles of Grenada, which might have been taken, if our officers had possessed the audacity. Of the famous expedition of Gen. HOVEY, from which we had been led to expect so much, the telegraph presents this morning the following tame and spiritless conclusion: "The results of the expedition sum up 160 rebels killed, wounded and captured; and our loss, 84 killed, wounded and missing." For an expedition, numbering, according to report, twenty thousand men—that traveled twenty miles or more by water, and marched seventy-five miles by land into the enemy's country, crossing two rivers on the route, and aiming at a vital point of the rebel country—we must say the above fruits do not seem large. The compensation is not obvious. If this is all that could be done, or that was intended to be done, Gen. HOVEY had done almost as well to have remained at Helena, and saved his transportation and the wear and tear of his men and animals.

And so of Gen. SHERMAN. Why did he march down so imposingly into Mississippi, stretching out his left flank to touch the moving columns of Gen. GRANT, if he did not intend to unite his force with GRANT's and form one grand army that should be able to sweep through Mississippi, capture Grenada, Jackson and Vicksburg, and thus enable Gen. McCLERNAND to open the Mississippi River and cleave the Confederacy asunder? To the people at this distance from the seat of war, who knew the work that had to be done in the Southwest, and who saw GRANT and SHERMAN in motion together, and HOVEY entering the enemy's country at the back-door, so to speak, and who were well-informed of the duty assigned to Gen. McCLERNAND, the tableau in the Southwest was recently quite inspiring. We were sanguine enough and almost certain enough of the entire Union occupation of Mississippi, in view of the combined movements we saw progressing, to pity the people of that State who had been abandoned by PRESIDENT'S "demoralized mob of conscripts," and they, their negroes and their cotton crops left to the tender mercies of the Yankees!

A night has changed all that. HOVEY returns bootless to Helena. SHERMAN, seeking his old base, resumes command of the bluffs at Memphis, and GRANT sticks in the mud at Oxford. Gen. McCLERNAND, it is clear, cannot open the Mississippi yet. No doubt there is reason for this sudden change of programme. And when we have that reason we shall probably be satisfied with it. But being left to our surmises, we confess to embarrassment. We do not comprehend the position. It cannot be that the enemy drove back our Generals. We know the reverse of this. The difficulty most complained of was that the enemy could not or would not be found—so timely and expeditious were his retreats. We have a dispatch this morning from Nashville, it is true, giving an account of a speech at Murfreesboro, last Friday night, by Gen. (Bishop) PEZE, in which this martial ecclesiast expressed the opinion that "GRANT would be defeated, and then Nashville would be assailed." Have our Generals a fear of any such result, and have HOVEY and SHERMAN drawn back to be in supporting distance of Nashville? We shall have light soon on these important and rather perplexing matters we hope.

UNPAID SOLDIERS—DEFICIENT SUPPLIES OF GOVERNMENT CURRENCY.—IN ANSWER to some inquiries in the TIMES, why the soldiers are not paid, and certain other inquiries to the same effect propounded in Congress, a correspondent in another column makes what is apparently a sufficient response. He alleges that the contractors are not exerting themselves as they might to meet the demand of the Treasury for paper currency, and that until they concentrate all their efforts and machinery upon the Government work the actual evil will continue. The point seems to be a good one, and should command the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury and of Congress. Why should not a Committee of Investigation be appointed?

Mr. Mason Jones' New Oration.

Last evening the Academy of Music was crowded to hear Mr. MASON JONES' new oration on the "European Aspect of the American Rebellion." Mr. JONES is a staunch Union man, and handles the monarchial and aristocratic despotisms of Europe without gloves. The nation most likely to interfere on behalf of the South, is FRANCE. NAPOLEON must keep the minds of his subjects employed by catching his large standing army to be actively engaged. When he was elected President of the Republic of France he neutralized Liberty there, and would, no doubt, endeavor to do so here. Mr. SUMNER was the limit in the tone of his dispatches; he must be more firm. Another, not Minister, should be sent in answer to any future attempts at mediation. The whole Southern institutions that have caused this rebellion must be swept away before peace is made, in order to prevent a recurrence. During the lecture Mr. JONES was frequently interrupted by prolonged applause; it will be repeated to-morrow evening.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Destination of the Banks Expedition.

THE FINANCES OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Cabinet Consultation on Army Affairs.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

THE BANKS EXPEDITION.

Much surprise is expressed here that the Times should, by its partial editorial indorsement, give importance to the idle rumor that Gen. BANKS has landed in North Carolina, and is marching on Richmond. It is a matter beyond speculation here, that the statement published in the evening yesterday regarding the Banks Expedition, gives the truth in regard to this heretofore inexplicable enterprise.

THE GOVERNMENT FINANCES.

Mr. WASHBURNE's resolution, which passed the House yesterday, declaring the judgment of that body to be that no change should be made in the existing laws providing for payment in coin of the interest on the public debt, and requiring payment in coin of custom duties, and Mr. McDOUGALL's resolutions from the Finance Committee to the same effect, introduced to-day into the Senate, met with general favor. It is a significant fact, that every member of the Committee of Ways and Means, except Mr. STEVENS, voted for Mr. WASHBURNE's resolution. The Government having borrowed large amounts of coin on the faith of the Contracts to be paid in coin, the change of these laws would have been a species of repudiation. The amount of outstanding Custom-house Demand Notes is now less than thirteen millions, and it is confidently estimated the whole amount will be absorbed for Customs by the middle of January. Mr. McDOUGALL's resolution is as follows:

Resolved, By the Senate of the United States in Congress Assembled, that the Government will maintain the payment of coin for interest on its indebtedness, and that they would consider it a breach of good faith with the public creditor to do otherwise.

Resolved, Second, that the duties on imports should continue to be collected in coin and the old issues of demand Notes only, and that when the latter should not be attainable for purposes of such payment, they shall thereafter be payable only in coin.

CABINET CONSULTATION.

There was a special session of the Cabinet to-day, which lasted till a late hour. The late military operations formed a prominent feature in the discussion.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. FREMONT.

Gen. FREMONT arrived here yesterday.

THE WEST POINT BILL.

A strong feeling is being manifested here against the West Point bill, which has so long embarrassed the operations of the army, and a resolution is expected to be introduced into the Senate to-morrow, indicating want of confidence in both Gen. BURNSIDE and Gen. MEADE.

WOUNDED.

About one thousand of the wounded from Fredericksburgh will be sent to Point Lookout, on the Chesapeake Bay.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE.

The Secretary of War has directed that all leaves of absence and furloughs to officers and men, on account of wounds or sickness, shall be granted at Headquarters of the Defences, Washington, corner of Fifteen-and-a-half-street and Pennsylvania-avenue, and all discharges at the Discharge-office, corner of Ninetenth-street and Pennsylvania-avenue.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.

ELIAS HOWE, Jr., known as the inventor of the lock-stitch used by most of the sewing machines, and whose income from those patents is said to be two or three hundred thousand dollars a year, is a private in the Seventeenth Connecticut Regiment, and has advanced the Government $11,500 with which to pay it off. The duty has just been performed by Major S. A. WALKER, Paymaster United States Army, who found the regiment encamping with the brigade of Gen. SYKES's Corps towards Fredericksburgh, and was obliged to make the payment of night, during a hail.

GEN. BUTLER'S RANK THE FIELD.

Gen. BUTLER's Service is ordered to report to Gen. DIX for active duty, and will leave at once for Fortress Monroe, where an important command will be assigned him. Gen. BUTLER, like Gen. DIX, is a citizen soldier; and, like that incomparable officer, he possesses that of which, among our Generals, there seems such "plenty and to spare"—intense and fixed loyalty, and using every energy and every power of the rebellion. His friends predict that he will be heard from.

SYMPATHY WITH LANCASHIRE.

Senator FESSENDEN, of New-Jersey, on Monday, introduced the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be instructed to report, at an early day as practicable, whether some method cannot be devised for extending relief, or, in some other way, manifesting the sympathy of Congress toward the suffering operatives in Great Britain, who, deprived of employment by reason of the measures to which the Government of the United States has been compelled to resort for the purpose of putting down rebellion, have nevertheless borne their sufferings with such exemplary patience, and have refused to clamor for foreign intervention in our affairs, but by so doing they should have the sacred cause for which we are contending.

REVOLVING IRON TOWER.

A Board of Engineers met in this city today, for the purpose of reporting upon TERRY's revolving iron tower for harbor defence. The Board consists of Gens. BARNARD and CULLUM, and Capt. MEIGS, of the Corps of Engineers.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

RECROSSING THE RAPPAHANNOCK.

From what is now known of the strength and extent of the enemy's fortifications, there seems to be a general approval of Gen. BURNSIDE's course in recrossing the Rappahannock. There is nothing heard here to show that the rebels were inclined to harass their strongholds to meet our troops on our return. All possible situation is being fastened upon the wounded, but comparatively few of whom have as yet arrived in Washington. Although our loss is heavy, it is far below some of the published estimates. But the precise number cannot for days to come, be ascertained.

THE M'DOWELL COURT OF INQUIRY.

In the McDowell Court of Inquiry, Gen. McDOWELL filed a number of papers bearing on his case, and the time of the session was occupied reading them.

THE PORTER COURT-MARTIAL.

The Porter court-martial has adjourned to Thursday, without business of consequence.

SECRETARY SMITH NOMINATED FOR JUDGE.

The President has nominated to the Senate Caleb B. SMITH, at present Secretary of the Interior, to be Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Indiana.

THE REMOVAL OF THE SIOUX.

Senator WILKINSON's bill for the removal of the several bands of the Sioux Indians, assigns them a new reservation near the Missouri River, sufficient to give eighty acres of good arable land to each individual; and appropriates $100,000 for their re-

ARMY APPROPRIATIONS.

The Army bill reported from the Committee of Ways and Means, appropriates $121,000,000 for the year ending with June, 1864.

PROPOSED CANAL.

Senator Howe's bill, in aid of a canal to connect the Minnesota River and the Red River of the North, grants for such purpose a million of acres of Minnesota land, besides the usual right of way of the land in width.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Gen. Sherman's Army Returned to Memphis.

Gen. Grant's Forces Still at Oxford.

CAIRO, ILL., Tuesday, Dec. 15.

Gen. Rosecrans's expedition has returned to Rolla, Arkansas.

The results of the expedition sum up one hundred and sixty rebels killed, wounded and captured, and our loss thirty-four killed, wounded and missing.

The army of Gen. Sherman has returned to Memphis.

The rebel army of Mississippi is said to be between Jackson and Canton.

Gen. Grant is still at Oxford with his forces.

An immediate advance of our forces is not expected.

The Mississippi Lake City was set on fire and destroyed by a band of guerrillas at Concordia, Ark., fifteen miles above the mouth of White River, on Monday last.

The next day the United States naval dispatch-boat Ke Foo shelled in Concordia and burnt 48 houses.

Much of the baggage belonging to the passengers of the Lake City was recovered.

The citizens of Concordia claim that they did all that was in their power to prevent the burning of the Lake City, and had sent a courier to Helena, Ark., to ask protection. Before the return of the courier, however, the Ke Foo had accomplished the destruction of the town.

Two regiments of National infantry and one company of cavalry surprised a band of rebels numbering 1,000, at Tuscumbia, on Saturday, completely routing them. Their loss in killed and wounded is unknown. Our forces captured seventy prisoners, a number of horses and burned the baggage of the rebels. Our loss was four killed and fourteen wounded.

IMPORTANT FROM NASHVILLE.

The Rebel Forces at Nolinsville Increased—Voluntary Surrender of Three Hundred Rebel Cavalry—Violation of a Flag of Truce, &c.

NASHVILLE, Monday, Dec. 14.

The rebels have increased their force at Nolinsville. Forrest has not been at Charlotte. The Rebels are still at Clarksville.

Three hundred of Wheeler's rebel cavalry came in with their arms, refusing to fight for the "Southern Confederacy" any longer.

Weather stormy.

NASHVILLE, Tuesday, Dec. 15.

A party of rebel cavalry, yesterday, grossly violated a flag of truce by pounding on a detachment of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, while awaiting a reply, capturing fifty-three of our men.

There is no prospect of a general advance of the rebels.

LOUISVILLE, Monday, Dec. 15.

The Nashville cars arrived on time. All is quiet along the road.

There is nothing new from the south of Nashville, except a slight and unimportant skirmish yesterday at Woodsonville.

The hospital opposite Munfordville was burned to-day. The soldiers were all safely removed. No lives were lost.

THE BANKS EXPEDITION.

The Fleet Passes Port Royal on Dec. 8.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

A letter received here, dated Port Royal, S. C., 12th inst., states that the Banks Expedition passed there on the 8th inst., bound South.

One of the steamers, Ga. Thomas, broke down and was towed into Port Royal.

Her troops will be forwarded to their destination in sailing vessels.

THE NIAGARA AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

The United States steam-transport Niagara, which left New-York on Saturday for the Banks Expedition, with five companies of the Fifteenth Massachusetts Regiment on board, put into the Breakwater yesterday lame.

Since the Niagara has arrived up to port. She is said to be entirely unseaworthy, and was built in the year 1850, for the Lake trade.

The vessel, while engaged in pumping the water out of the Niagara, discovered her timbers to be very rotten.

IMPORTANT FROM NORTH CAROLINA

A Large Fleet Seen Entering Cape Fear River.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, Dec. 16.

It is reported by the Old Point boat that the English steamer Chicora had arrived there, and reported having seen a large fleet entering Cape Fear River.

Government Currency—Why the Soldiers are not Paid.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On Monday Mr. VAN WICK, who has the interest of the soldier peculiarly at heart, moved, in the House of Representatives, a resolution of inquiry to ascertain why the Secretary of the Treasury fails to meet the requisitions of the Paymasters of the army. I learn from other sources, that to satisfy the demands of the army pay-roll, $3,000,000 a day are required, while the Treasury supplies only $800,000. Whole regiments have received no pay for a year. The case of one which has been fifteen months in the service without obtaining one dollar of pay, has been made public. Households from one end of the loyal States to the other face the Winter with the certainty of destitution before them, because the Government cannot redeem its promises. The desertions which deplete our armies as fast as they are recruited, are owing, to the aspects the soldier receives from a family suffering from starvation at home, and demanding his presence, care and support. Beyond, therefore, the mere injustice of the thing, the desertion Secretary of Gov. chicaling engagements with his country, was that by very implication relieving the money from disengagements with the Government, cause the disengagement and leave the Secretary transportation as well as the military service. The inquiry of the New-York Representative is eminently pertinent.

But the urgency of the question is conspicuous for other reasons. The Government has entirely failed to supply the business community either with demand notes or postal currency. The long lines of applicants for the latter at the Assistant-Treasurer's office on Wall-street; the clamors of the West for a circulating medium, and the means of making change—clamors which have thus far obtained no appreciable response from Mr. CHASE—are evidences that the business of the country suffers as profoundly from the inertness of the Department as do its military interests.

The nation is utterly perplexed because of causes supposed to be known to the financial managers of the Government; and demands to be told what these causes are.

If the answer be honestly made, it will be substantially thus: Authorized by Congress to negotiate for the manufacture of paper currency, Secretary CHASE was induced to make his bargain with two organizations having a common interest, and uniformly allied in policy—the American Bank Note Company and the National Bank Note Company. A combination so powerful could easily exclude all competition. It demanded and obtained a monopoly of the manufacture, and the contracts were so arranged as to leave the Government at the mercy of the two companies. To that mercy the Government has reaped nothing but disappointment. The notes, whether for dollars or fractions, have been doled out in coins as policy as to defeat all the financial plans of the Government, to demoralize the army, and plunge the entire country in embarrassment and discomfort. When expostulated with, the Contractors have had but one answer. The people, for lack of knowledge, have accepted it as conclusive. They tell us they turn out the notes as rapidly as their machinery permits. To furnish larger quantities would be impossible. Every energy, they assert, is enlisted to meet the wants of the Treasury. They can do no more. And it would, indeed, seem impossible that corporations, soulless as they are, would omit to employ every human agency to meet at once the wants of the nation and their own engagements.

But it is no professional secret that the power of producing Bank notes, after the dies have been once combined into a plate—the work of a few hours, where, as with the National currency, printed by the two Companies, none but old dies are used—is only limited by the number of cheap printing presses the contractor puts in operation. If a hundred will not furnish the results demanded by the contract, a thousand should, as they can easily be set at work. But I charge that the two Companies, so far from endeavoring to enlarge their facilities, so as to relieve the public necessities, are devoting their energies to finding other employment for their presses than the Government work. Sure of the latter, through I know not what arrangements, their agents are to be found everywhere soliciting contracts with banks for their notes, with corporations for their shinplasters, with manufacturers for their labels, with railroad companies for their tickets. Both, I am informed, are in competition for the currency notes contemplated by the Corporation of New-York. I find the imprint of the "National Bank-Note Company" on scrip issued by Jersey City, and that of the "American Bank-Note Company" on scrip issued by the City of Poughkeepsie. They run any number of presses upon work obtained by the solicitations of their agents; and every press so ran is withdrawn from the creation of Government currency; and for every shinplaster, note, label or ticket printed, a sheet of Government bills might be produced. In other words, while the Government contractors permit one note not called for by their pledges to the Treasury, they withhold for their own profit, the pay of the soldier, and the money for which the public is suffering. And, I may add, every man who employs them to execute work, aside from their Government contract, is contributing to the deplorable misfortunes of the country.

Of these facts I assume Mr. CHASE to be sufficiently informed, for only a few weeks since he purchased the presses and other machinery necessary for the Government to assist the contractors in the work of creating paper money. He has since abandoned this plan, and passed over the machinery to the contractors; but if he fails to tell Congress, in answer to Mr. VAN WICK'S resolution, that the Paymasters are not supplied because the contractors do not furnish the notes fast enough, because they do not choose to confine themselves to Government work, he will deliberately conceal what he knows to be true. NEW-YORK, Dec. 16, 1862.

AN IMPORTANT MOVEMENT IN THE COAL TRADE.—The advertisement, in another column, of a sale at auction of Scranton Coal, by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, to an amount of 30,000 tons, is certainly worthy of notice. The Company contemplates regular monthly sales hereafter.

Notes on Chronic Diseases.
NUMBER IX.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Before concluding the first series of my "Notes of Chronic Diseases," I desire to add a few remarks upon a malady which is very generally complained of, and is as often entirely misunderstood. I allude to Sciatica.

This is a form of neuralgia. It affects the large nerves of the lower extremities which are situated at the back part of the thighs, supplying them with branches, especially the muscles, and then passing into the legs, and they also are the great media of the supply of their nerves. The pain and tenderness occasioned by Sciatica are usually constant, and especially involve the buttocks, knee joints and legs, occasioning more or less lameness. This disease may depend on rheumatic inflammation of the nerve or its sheath, on some irritation of the kidney or bowels, particularly within the lower part of the abdomen, where the nerve takes its origin, or it may arise from mere nervous weakness or excitement.

Sciatica is often a troublesome and tedious complaint, but it is only by neglect it becomes chronic. I have had large experience in its treatment, and can confidently offer to those who suffer from it a speedy and radical cure. Yours, very truly,

A. WOLF, M. D.,
Physician for Chronic Diseases,
No. 832 Broadway, New-York.

A summary of the results of my practice in the treatment of Chronic Diseases, will close the present series of my "Notes." They will be resumed in January, 1863.

STATEMENT OF GEO. I. E. LASHER, ESQ., A WEALTHY AND INFLUENTIAL CITIZEN OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY, NEW-YORK.
SPRAKER'S DAIRY, Jan. 3, 1860.
Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Co.:
I take pleasure in stating the good results of the use of Dr. WISTER' BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY in this vicinity. For the last ten years I have observed its effects in cases of sudden colds as well as in seated coughs. I have used it in my family and have induced many others to make use of it, in some instances where the case was considered very critical.
I am happy to state that the effect has always proved satisfactory, and I would earnestly recommend its use, without delay, to all persons in any way afflicted with throat or lung diseases. Very truly, yours,
GEORGE I. E. LASHER.

One double-geared Slide-Lathe, to swing 30 inches diameter, bed-plate 10 feet to turn 14 feet; compound rest, for boring and turning cones; change-wheels for screw cutting; dead rest, for holding work to be bored in the end; two face plates, and one universal chuck and overhead motion complete; and to furnish wheels for cutting screw 8, 10 and 11-inch guns.

One double-geared Slide Lathe, to swing 18 inches diameter, bed-plate to turn 12 feet; compound rest, for boring and turning cones; change-wheels for screw cutting; dead rest, for holding work to be bored in the end; two face plates, and one universal chuck and overhead motion complete.

One double-geared column Drilling Machine, with adjustable table so arranged that any part of the table can be brought under the drill, to take in work four feet high, to bore holes up to 12 inches in diameter, with adjustable self-acting feeding motion and overhead driving motion complete.

One Stationary Engine (horizontal) of 11-inch cylinder—3 feet stroke.

One Planing Machine 20 plane 8 feet; to be 20 inches high and 30 inches wide, and overhead driving motion complete.

Bids will be required for each article, not separating component parts, and the awards will be made to the lowest bidder, in the manner prescribed by law.

They are to be put up in their proper places by the seller, who must give evidence that they have successfully performed the work extended of them for thirty days before they can be received and paid for.

If the engine or any of the machines fail in their working, or break down within the time above specified, they are to be removed entirely at the cost of the seller.

Each offer must be accompanied by a written guarantee signed by one or more responsible persons, certified to by some officer of the Government, stating that the party offering, if his offer is the lowest, will immediately enter into contract, if it is deemed necessary, for the faithful performance of the work.

Any additional information required can be obtained at the Ordnance Office at the Navy-Yard.

I. HENDERSON, Navy Agent.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED by the School Officers of the Eighth Ward, at the office of the Clerk of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm sts., until Wednesday, the seventeenth day of December, instant, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the erection and completion of a new school-house, including steam heating apparatus, in the same, to be erected on a site now occupied by Ward School No. 6, in said Ward. Plans and specifications for said school-house, including steam heating apparatus, can be seen at the office of the Superintendent of Schools, Public School No. 1, Franklin-st. Proposals must state the estimate for each branch of the work separately, and be indorsed "Proposals for Mason Work;" "Proposals for Carpenter Work;" "Proposals for Painting;" "Proposals for Heating." Proposals for the heating must be accompanied with accurate drawings and descriptions of the apparatus intended to be furnished, otherwise they will be rejected. Two responsible sureties will be required from each successful bidder, and no proposal will be considered in which no sureties are named.

The School Officers of the Ward reserve the right to reject any or all of the proposals offered, if deemed for the public interest so to do.

AUCTION SALES.

SCRANTON COAL AT AUCTION.
OFFICE OF THE DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA AND WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, No. 35 WILLIAM-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 10, 1862.

The Board of Managers will sell at public auction, on TUESDAY (Christmas day), at the Exchange, Nov. 20 and 22 Broadway, commencing at 12 o'clock, M., at the room now used as the Stock Exchange, THIRTY THOUSAND TONS OF FRESH-MINED SCRANTON COAL, embracing all the usual sizes, and deliverable at their depot, Elizabethport, N. J., after the 1st of January next. They will repeat such auction sales on or about the 20th of each month during the year 1863.

The sale will be positive. Each lot put up will be sold to the highest bidder; no bids, in any form whatever, being made but on account of or on behalf of the Company.

Fifty cents per ton, in bankable funds, to be paid at the time and place of sale, and the balance in like funds, on receiving the order for the coal, which must be called for within ten days thereafter, and the coal taken away within thirty days from the day of sale, unless navigation is obstructed.

The other conditions of sale will be substantially those hitherto accepted by all purchasers, by private contract, of coal deliverable at Elizabethport so far as applicable. The coal will be delivered direct from the cars on their arrival from the mines, when practicable—other wise from the stock. These conditions will be modified to meet the wants of Coastwise Shippers, whose arrival cannot be definitely fixed.

The inauguration of a system of monthly sales at auction, the Board are aware, is a great departure from previous usages of the Trade; but with a reliable avenue from the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys side water, open every day in the year, (Sundays excepted,) requiring but 18 hours for the transit of the trains, the advantages of such sales, and the superior condition in which the coal will be delivered, are so apparent, they cannot doubt this mode of selling will commend itself to the favorable consideration both of the Trade and Consumers, whose cooperation is respectfully invited.

C. K. ROBERT, President.

NOTICE TO SHOE DEALERS.—THE MACHINE-sewed Boots, those having the soles and uppers united by stitches passing through and through the soles, from the insole to the outside of the uppers, are patented as an article of manufacture. So all those who use, unless they have our license stamp upon them, is an infringement of our patent. To avoid any vexatious delay, we will furnish license stamps gratis until the first of January, 1863, to those dealers who have these shoes on hand, purchased before the 1st of December, 1862, on application to us. Such applications must be accompanied with proof of the date of purchase, number of pairs, name of manufacturer, and, as nearly as possible, the size of manufacturing. All persons selling these shoes without the license stamps after the 1st of December, 1862, will be prosecuted for infringing our patent.

WITH THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC

moved forward to the left to the support of Meagher's Division. Gracom had meanwhile come up. The musketry fight was then very heavy, and this division suffered severely.

Adjoining the First Corps under Reynolds W as the Third Corps under Gen. Sumner, occupying the following position: In three lines of battle from the river to the right; Gen. Sumner on the centre, and Gen. Howe on the left, connecting with Reynolds' Corps. At sunrise the skirmishers commenced moving forward, Gen. Varian commanding.

About 9 o'clock the rebels opened a heavy volley upon the men. Some of their batteries were but a short distance away. A burning dwelling, which attracted considerable attention the night previous, was destroyed by them in order to make better their range. Meanwhile New-York Battery, Pratt's First New-York, and Snow's First Maryland replied to the rebel guns with much spirit.

At 3 o'clock Gen. Newton's was withdrawn from the outposts of this corps, and took a position on the extreme left of Burnside's command, where it was actively employed during the remainder of the day.

About 4 o'clock the Fourth New-Jersey were ordered to charge upon a force of the enemy near the railroad, which they did, driving them back for 100 yards or more. A superior force then appearing against them, they were forced to retire. Col. H. B. Hall fell, wounded in the leg. The rebels ceased their artillery fire on this portion of the army about 12 o'clock in the morning. Toward evening, however, they sent a full brigade in the direction of Maxwell's Battery, who came on with a yell, expecting to capture it. The warm reception which they received from the battery and the Second and Fourth Vermont Regiments, which were acting as skirmishers, compelled them to fall back. At the same time the whole line of infantry, composed of Pratt's and Vinyard's Brigades, stood to arms, and advanced with fixed bayonets. Night put an end to further operations on either side, with the exception of occasional discharges from our heavy guns.

The result of the day's fighting on the left, so diversified in its character, was to give the left possession of a space about five hundred yards in extent. So far as stubbornly holding its own and even gaining ground on the enemy, the Left Grand Division deserves credit. It had, however, wholly failed to perform the critical manœuvre assigned to it.

Returning to the right, I found Gen. Sumner seated on the front seat of an unyoked ambulance, at the Lacy House, directly opposite Fredericksburgh, at Falmouth, where the first pontoon bridge spans the stream. The veteran soldier had been extremely desirous of crossing over and directing in person the movements of his Grand Division, but the Commander-in-Chief would not permit it, and as a compromise he had come down from the Phillips House, (which the latter had made his headquarters for the day) with front the river, and established it here at its foot. I think he has long during regret that the leashed hounds were kept so long upon the threat of the hunter. He had been ordered to cross the river, and he had become anxious lest he should be late in obeying the order, with a decent respect for every subject, I remained with the General in the ambulance, to listen the tide of battle as reported by continually arriving Aids and Couriers.

The old man looked anxious and fearful. Things were not going well with his command. For three hours his men had been fighting at fearful odds. They were much scattered, their loss was excessive, and nothing had been accomplished. Indeed, to the foot of the ear, at the point where we were located, it seemed as though they were being badly pressed. The batteries had been brought down and planted at the heads of the streets. The troops were hugging the city closely to escape the fearful fire. "Where is Franklin?" was the eager inquiry. "Everything depends on Franklin's coming up on the flank."

Franklin's position was plainly observable by the line of smoke and fire a couple of miles to our left below. He was making no nearer.

At 3 o'clock an aid arrives from Gen. Cooch to say that his (Cooch's) troops were advancing finely; but that Wilcox was not keeping up. "Tell Gen. Wilcox," replied Gen. Sumner, "tell him he must make the Ninth Army Corps keep pace with the Second, if he can."

At 3½ o'clock, Sumner, who has been clinging to the valley amid showers of fire, is so hotly pressed that "he hardly thinks he can hold his own till Franklin comes up."

At 4 o'clock, Franklin reports that his right is held by a brigade (Mason's,) which is without ammunition!

Sumner sends a message begging Burnside that Franklin be directed to advance. But Franklin cannot advance. He has enough to do at this moment to hold his own, for Jackson has just thrown in reinforcements, and is pushing hard to turn his left.

Meantime the reserves have not been touched. Hooker's Central Grand Division—fifty thousand fresh men—have not yet been engaged; indeed are not nearly on the side of the river.

"Tell Gen. Burnside that he had better, by all odds, throw some of Hooker's in."

Burnside replies that he has directly ordered Hooker to go in, and that every man on this side of the river shall cross.

Promptly the column is pushed down to the pontoons. Hooker's Division of Burnside's corps leading. The wary rebels, sharply on the alert for the movement of troops, and having a battery or two admirably trained on the bridge, pour in the shells, and somewhat delay operations. Happily, though they fall all round the bridge, and kill some men on the bridge, they do the structure no harm. In case they do, however, a corps of pontoniers stand ready to repair any damage.

At 4 o'clock, Gen. Hooker, who had not yet been across the river, proceeded over, remarking to a friend that he "was going to put this thing through."

In half an hour prodigious volleys of musketry announce that Hooker, with the Reserves, is engaged. This last assaulting column consisted of the divisions of Hancock, Meagher, Howard, Getty and Sykes. They had, however, hardly got fairly engaged before the sun went down, and night closed around the whole scene of the combatants.

At this time, Gen. Burnside, who had remained all day at the Phillips House, came down to the Lacy House; and, in the garden facing the city, followed the progress of the fight. Externally calm, the leading player in this tremendous game, was agitated by such intensity of feeling as one can conceive, and he paced the garden gloomy as night.

"Shall every thing be continued indefinitely," said he, "must we continue to slaughter?"

The heavy fog of time into which the stupendous issue of this day had to be crowded seemed to add redoubled energy to the fury of the combatants.

"Night or Sumner," as Washington said of Wayne, but rather Ajax's prayer for "a more light," was the groaning of every heart.

Creeping up on the flank by the left, Gamble's troops succeeded in gaining the stone wall which we had been unable all day to wrench from the rebels. The other forces pushed for the crest. Our field batteries, which, owing to the restricted space, had been of but little use all day, were brought vigorously into play. It was the fierce passionate climax of the battle. From both sides two miles of batteries belched forth their fiery missiles athwart the dark background of the night. Volleys of musketry were poured forth such as we have no parallel of in all our experiences of the war, and which seemed as though all the demons of earth and air were contending together. Reaching up the crest our troops had got within a stone's throw of the batteries, when the hill-top swarmed forth in new reinforcements of rebel infantry, who, rushing upon our then, drove them back. The turn of a die decides such situations. The day was lost! Our men retired. Immediately cannon and musketry ceased their roar, and in a moment the silence of death succeeded the stormy fury of ten hours battle.

As Gen. Burnside, turning, walked off through the garden, and mounting his horse galloped back to his headquarters, what thoughts and feelings passed through his mind? No illusions could make him believe that a victory had been achieved.

Shall we say, then, it was a defeat? Certainly, if to have started out to accomplish a certain object, and to have failed in doing so, be a defeat, you can apply no other term to the upshot of to-day's battle.

In spite of all the glosses of official telegrams which you may receive, it seems here to-night that we have suffered a defeat. Let us hope that, when fully prepared, the assault may be renewed with new tactical combination, the position carried and the day retrieved. If it be not so, Saturday, the 13th day of December, must be accounted a black day in the calendar of the Republic.

If you are disposed to indulge in criticism on the plan of the battle of Fredericksburgh it will not be difficult to point out its great and radical defects. To have hurled forward masses of men against the fortified works of those terraces was certainly a manifestation of daring, untempered by the slightest prudence. Was it not, also, a fatal error to have risked the whole success of the plan on the accomplishment of a certain manœuvre (Franklin's ability to swing round on the rebel flank, namely,) where all the elements of the problem were completely wanting? What a fearful fatality, too, that our accumulation of artillery was all but entirely useless to us, owing to the distance of the range and the exposure of our own troops. And what a misfortune, equally lamentable, that the approach to the rebel position back of Fredericksburgh was an area so restricted that our field batteries were almost equally useless owing to the impossibility of manœuvring!

In the course of this correspondence, from the time of our first occupation of Falmouth, I have informed you of the gradual development of the rebel position, from an absolutely defenceless condition to the time that it became another Gibraltar. Never for a moment did we, who watched this progress, suppose that it would ever be attempted to be taken by hurling masses of men against those works. We had supposed that the resources of strategy would assuredly afford other means of accomplishing the desired end.

Regarded as a position of defence, that which the rebel leaders have taken up on the Rappahannock, and which we have been pleased to assail in the manner indicated and with the result known, none could possibly be more magnificent or more nearly impregnable. With fifty thousand men they should easily hold it against three times that number of assailants. And indeed they appear never to have employed more than about that number. Every time we poured forward fresh men, they had ready reinforcements to match. From prisoners taken, I learn that on the right, commanded by Jackson, half of the force only (and chiefly the division of A. P. Hill, and Early's Brigade) was engaged. I take it that they had along the line of the Rappahannock about one hundred thousand men, and that fifty thousand more or less were actually engaged in the contest.

The Confederate leaders have acted with their usual williness in this whole matter. They did well to let us so easily into Fredericksburgh, firing but half a dozen guns when they could have brought a hundred to bear upon us. The city itself was the veriest trap that ever was laid—and we have walked into it.

Is it any wonder that with such a position—on the inside of an arc of a circle of batteries—

"'Mid upper, nether and surrounding fires"—

our troops were over and over again broken and shattered in the attempt to take it? The wonder is that such admirable pluck was shown.

It is a hopeless task, now, to go back over the series of blunders that have made this disaster possible—to inquire, for instance, who is responsible for the delaying of the pontoon bridges ten days beyond the time promised Gen. Burnside, thus enabling the rebels to render their position impregnable. Enough that he inquisition will come by and by.

At the close of the battle to-night, Gen. Burnside declared that he would renew the contest in the morning. There is to my mind, however, little probability that this will be done, or can be done. It is likely that the Council of Generals—composed of Burnside, Sumner, Hooker and Franklin—now sitting at this house, will shake this determination, as I know they are all opposed to the measure. Indeed, one has only to go over to Fredericksburgh, where the army is now huddled, and see its shattered and broken condition—regiments scattered, disorganized, &c.—to see that a renewal of the fight in the morning, or even for some time, is wholly impossible.

What the upshot of the whole affair is destined to be, if is, of course, fruitless to conjecture. We can, no doubt, by the adoption of the right plan, force their position. Their right is really their weak point; and that, by the way, they are now busily engaged in strengthening to-night. The line of the river is, however, entirely too long to be guarded against enterprising attacks, and with the proper dispositions, their position can readily be flanked. The situation of our army, however—as closed of a river—is a perilous one—one of the most demoralizing known; and it may be the dictate of prudence to withdraw the army as soon as possible to the north bank of the Rappahannock.
